RECORDS OF THE SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC HISTORY OF ENGLAND AND WALES

ENGLAND possesses the most remarkable set of records of economic and social history in the world. Beginning with the Domesday Survey, that unique description of eleventh-century society, we get a continuous series of cartularies, extents, ministers' accounts, terriers, revenue-rolls, agricultural, industrial, and commercial documents of all kinds, ranging to the present time. Unfortunately only a comparatively small portion of them has been published or even described. The importance of such publications as those of the Abingdon, Gloucester, Ramsey Cartularies in the Rolls Series, the Domesday of St. Paul's, the Black Book of Peterborough, the Cartulary of Battle Abbey in the Camden Series, brings forcibly home the necessity of rendering accessible to the public a vast store of similar documents. There is at present no Society able to proceed with such work in a systematic manner worthy of its national and scientific importance. The publications of the Rolls Series have been discontinued ; the Royal Historical Society, which has taken over the Camden Series, has to divide its energies among many subjects; local societies bring from time to time welcome contributions, but these are scattered and difficult of access, and appear more or less accidentally without any systematic co-ordination. There is surely a field here for a great national undertaking, which at the same time would be highly appreciated by scholars abroad, and the British Academy has decided to make an attempt to call forth and organize efforts in this direction. With this view a Committee has been formed consisting of Viscount Bryce (President of the Academy), Professor P. Vinogradoff as director of publications, Archdeacon Cunningham, Professor C. H. Firth, Professor Gollancz (Secretary of the Academy), Dr. R. L. Poole, Dr. G. W. Prothero, Sir John Rhŷs, Professor Tout, and Sir George Warner. A grant in aid has been voted by Parliament on the proposal of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury towards the expenses of the publication of the Series.

RECORDS OF THE SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC HISTORY OF ENGLAND AND WALES.

Vol. I. Survey of the Honour of Denbigh, A.D. 1334, published from a MS. given by the late Dr. Seebohm to the Maitland Library in Oxford, edited by Professor P. Vinogradoff and Mr. Frank Morgan, M.A., of Keble College, Oxford; 8vo, 16*s*.

II. The Register of St. Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury, commonly called The Black Book, from a thirteenth-century MS., Cotton Faustina A. i, at the British Museum, edited by G. J. Turner, M.A., Barrister, of Lincoln's Inn, and the Rev. H. E. Salter, M.A., Part I, 8vo, 16*s*.

THE FOLLOWING VOLUMES ARE IN COURSE OF PREPARATION:

III. The Register of St. Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury, commonly called The Black Book, Part II, edited by G. J. Turner, M.A., Barrister, of Lincoln's Inn, and the Rev. H. E. Salter, M.A. An Eleventh-Century Inquisition of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, edited by the late A. Ballard, M.A., LL.B.

IV. (a) A Feodary of the Templars, A.D. 1185, edited by the late Marquis d'Albon, editor of the Cartulaire des Templiers, and by the Rev. H. E. Salter, M.A.

(b) A Terrier of Fleet, Lincolnshire, from a MS. in the British Museum, edited by Miss N. Neilson, Ph.D., Lecturer at Mount Holyoke College, Mass., U.S.A.

V. Documents illustrative of the Social and Economic History of the Danelaw, from various collections, edited by F. M. Stenton, M.A., Professor at University College, Reading.

VI. A Book of Accounts of Bolton Abbey, Yorkshire, from a MS. in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire, edited by R. J. Whitwell, B.Litt.

PREFATORY NOTE

THIS volume contains the first part of The Black Book of St. Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury. The remainder will appear in a second volume, which will be paged continuously with the first. The damaged state of some portions of the text has been a source of trouble to the editors, and, owing to the nature of the writing, the correct reading of many of the proper names is doubtful; it may therefore be necessary to amend the transcription of some of these names when the index is made. The volume contains the first section of the Introduction. The remaining sections will appear in the second volume, which will also contain an alphabetical glossary of the more obscure words in the text. The editors desire to express their thanks to Sir George Warner and Professor Vinogradoff, who have been supervising the work on behalf of the British Academy, for their assistance and advice; to the Rev. Claude Jenkins, Librarian of Lambeth Palace, for assistance over the ecclesiastical documents printed on pp. 356–359; and to Professor F. M. Stenton, of the University of Reading, for criticizing the proofs of the Introduction and making many suggestions which have been gladly followed.

THE BLACK BOOK OF ST. AUGUSTINE . . . 1

INTRODUCTION

I. THE ESTATES OF THE ABBEY

THE Register[1] of St. Austin's Abbey, Canterbury, commonly called the Black Book, was for the most part compiled in the closing years of the thirteenth century, but numerous entries of later date are written on folios which have been left wholly or partially blank, and in some cases on additional folios which have been bound into the original volume. The whole register may be divided into two parts, which differ considerably from one another in character. The second and smaller part forms a collection of charters and other legal instruments by which the abbey acquired various small properties after the Norman Conquest. The earlier and perhaps the more interesting part[2] contains a rental and custumal of the chief estates of the abbey, together with much additional matter, such as ordinations of vicarages, documents relating to ecclesiastical taxation, and a few charters of various dates. These entries have (with a few exceptions) been here printed in smaller type, as being additional matter and no part of the original work. The Black Book, then, from its lack of early charters, and from the special character of its contents, cannot be one of our chief sources for the history of the estates. But this edition has for its main object the contribution of material for the elucidation of the legal and agrarian institutions of Kent, and for this the Black Book, with its full and detailed particulars of rents and customs, must supply much useful information.

A brief account of the estates of the abbey will nevertheless be useful to readers of the present volume; and a review of the various charters by which the monks acquired them is almost indispensable to a proper appreciation of some of the institutions of Kent. In order, for instance, to come to any conclusions about the meaning of the measures of land known as the sulung and the yoke, we must consider the earliest charters in which they are mentioned, with especial reference to their authenticity and relation one to another.

The early history of St. Austin's is known to us chiefly from two chronicles. One, that of William of Thorne, extending from the foundation of the abbey to the year 1397, was published in 1652 by Sir Roger Twysden in his Decem Scriptores. The other, the chronicle of Thomas of Elmham, extending from the foundation to the year 806, and from 1087 to 1418, with a series of charters ending in 1191, was edited by the late Charles Hardwick and published in the Rolls Series[1] in 1858.

The earlier part of Thorne's chronicle, ending with the year 1228, is partly based upon an unprinted chronicle by Thomas Sprott, a monk of St. Austin's; the remainder is based upon his own researches, for Thorne himself says:

> Hucusque cronica sua partim perduxit T. Sprot, abhinc idem frater Willelmus sui temporis digessit historiam.

Unfortunately we have no undoubted manuscript of Sprott's chronicle in our public libraries. Some scholars have attributed to him the manuscript Lives of the Abbots of St. Austin's at the British Museum, there catalogued as Tiberius A. ix. This work, which has been badly damaged by fire and is without title, closely resembles, especially in the earlier part, Thorne's chronicle, and if it is not Sprott's chronicle, may have been based upon it. The last abbot mentioned in these Lives is Roger of Chichester, who succeeded Robert of Battle in 1252. They contain interesting information not found elsewhere, and in spite of their damaged state, deserve publication. The well-known 'epitome of Sprott' ending with the year 1221 (Vitellius E. xiv)—compiled by John Joscelyn, who died in 1603—is chiefly remarkable for its heading:

> Ex cronica Thome Sprott monachi Augustini monasterii qui uixit circa annum Domini 1270.

This last date agrees with what Thorne says in his Prologue. If, however, Sprott lived till 1270, it is strange that Thorne should have used his work as far as the year 1228 only. Possibly the entry in Thorne's chronicle quoted above is misplaced; for, as Thorne's chronicle extends to 1397, a great part of the period between 1228 and that date cannot be described accurately as sui temporis historia. Bale's statement about Sprott and Thorne is of some interest. Writing of the former, whom he calls Spotte, he says,[1] > suorum abbatum historiam congesserit, ab aduentu Augustini (ut uocant) Anglorum apostoli in Brytanniam usque ad annum a Christo nato 1272; hanc Guilhelmus Thornus eiusdem ordinis et coenobii monachus postea deflorauit atque eis de suis addidit.

Thorne gives copies of none of the charters of the Saxon kings after Edbald, but refers to the charters, and mentions when they were granted and what they comprised. For their text we have to go to Elmham's History, in which most of them are recited at length; and to the two thirteenth-century registers of the abbey at the British Museum and the Public Record Office respectively, which unfortunately have never been examined critically.[2] A careful comparison of these authorities shows that the chronicle of Thorne, as regards its notices of the charters, is chiefly, though not wholly, based upon the charters themselves. The authenticity of the latter must therefore be a matter of great importance to the history of the estates of the abbey.

Unfortunately, the charters of St. Austin's have a bad reputation. In the first place, a violent dispute arose in the twelfth century between the monks of the abbey and the archbishop of Canterbury over the abbot's claim to various ecclesiastical privileges. Two ancient documents only, one a charter of [1] Scriptorum Illustrium Maioris Britanniae Catalogus, edition of 1559, p. 326. This appeared nearly a century before the publication of Thorne's chronicle. The statement quoted above is not found in the first edition, which was published in 1548 and intituled Illustrium Maioris Britanniae Scriptorum Summarium. He repeats, however, the words (fol. 138):

> Hoc solum reperio quod inter otia literaria sue ciuitatis et duorum inibi magnificorum coenobiorum diligentissimo studio celebria facta collegerit.

At this date Bale, as he states himself, was uncertain when Sprott flourished. It appears that the name was usually written as Sport (M. R. James, Ancient Libraries of Canterbury and Dover, pp. 271, 288, 309, 316). In the edition of 1559 Bale attributes two works to Thomas Sport, namely, Cantuariorum Historia and Abbatum suorum uitae. The latter is possibly Tiberius A. ix. (See p. xiv above.)

Ethelbert the first of Kent, the other the 'priuilegium' of St. Austin, were produced to the commissioners appointed by Pope Alexander III to investigate the charges of forgery brought by the archbishop in relation to this dispute. Though no decision was given upon the genuineness of the documents, historian Gervase of Canterbury, himself a monk of Christ Church, has declared that Ethelbert's charter was 'very ancient with erasures and additions as if it had been emended, and without a seal'.[1] His actual words should be noticed, for their meaning is not free from doubt:

> quarum prima uetustissima erat rasa et subscripta ac si esset emendata, et absque sigillo.

His objection, that it bore no seal, merely shows his ignorance of very ancient charters; but its alleged emendation, though not surprising, is of more importance. If, however, he virtually admits that Ethelbert's charter may have been an original document, he is quite certain that the 'priuilegium' of St. Austin was a forgery. He tells us that its writing and its leaden bull were of recent date, and that Cisalpine bishops and primates were not wont to affix such bulls to their authentic writings. Moreover, the nature of its Latin and its language seemed to differ from the Roman style. Modern critics have not only approved Gervase of Canterbury's condemnation of the 'priuilegium'; but they have also condemned a large number of other papal instruments which appear in the abbey registers. These, however, are ecclesiastical documents with which we are not concerned; and the temptations which may have induced the monks to forge or inflate them would scarcely have extended to their royal charters. Nevertheless, the authenticity of these also has been impeached. Kemble has printed more than thirty of them in his Codex Diplomaticus;[2] but has marked all save twelve[1] with an asterisk to signify that they are either ascertained forgeries or are documents which from some cause appeared to him to be liable to suspicion. He makes no attempt to justify his condemnation of individual documents, but he explains in his Introduction what seem to him to be sufficient grounds for the condemnation of charters in general, some being historical, some diplomatic, and some chronological. Kemble's asterisk, though it records the opinion of an eminent Saxon scholar, should not be taken as final; for much which relates to early charters has come to light since his day, and the documents in his collection marked with an asterisk will usually repay careful consideration.

It would of course be absurd to deny that ancient charters have not infrequently been forged; but none the less we should do well to refrain from condemning a long series of charters, such as those of St. Austin's Abbey, as manifest forgeries, without strong evidence, and especially when all obvious motive for forgery is missing. The production of an early Saxon charter would be of little avail in an action for the recovery of land or franchises after the Norman Conquest. It would certainly have involved great risk of detection and punishment; for the lawyers and clerks of the Middle Ages were not entirely ignorant of palaeography and elementary chronology. Nor need we assume that a charter is a manifest forgery merely because it is not written in a contemporary hand, or because it contains words and expressions of a later age, or because some of the bishops who witnessed it were not in office at the time when it was granted. Charters were no doubt copied from time to time for other than merely legal purposes. An abbot, for instance, might desire a copy of an early charter as an object of antiquarian interest. He might order it to be made in a fair hand of his own period, or he might prefer to have the hand of the original imitated as closely as possible. The copy might be made by a scribe ignorant of history and chronology, and his copy, excellent in appearance, might be full of mistakes and absurdities. We need impute no corrupt or fraudulent intention to the abbot or his monks when we meet with charters of this class.

Among the documents reckoned as forgeries at the British Museum is one which purports to be a grant by Wulfhere, king of the Mercians, of various lands and privileges to the abbey of Peterborough.[1] It contains much matter which obviously cannot have been in any original charter granted by Wulfhere. Its writer seems to have introduced particular descriptions from later documents in substitution for the general words of an older document, which may have been Wulfhere's original. Perhaps he wished to combine utility with elegance. We may doubt whether he even contemplated the possibility of this copy, written in an excellent but unmistakable hand of the fourteenth century, being seriously considered as a true copy of a genuine charter; and the same doubt should arise in the case of many other transcripts of ancient documents.[2]

Our earliest charters, differing from those issued after the Norman Conquest, bore no seals. They were confirmed by bishops, nobles, and others whose assent was noted on the charters by some such words as Ego N. subscripsi or Ego N. concessi or Signum manus N.; and opposite each of the names the writer of the charter drew a small cross. Thus there was no distinguishing mark of authenticity about the charter. The witnesses may have placed their fingers on their respective crosses, and have uttered certain ceremonial words when they were delivered, but to all appearance a copy made by a scribe of the period would have been undistinguishable from an original. We may doubt whether the Saxon lawyers specially insisted upon the careful preservation of the earliest charters, or whether their grantors seriously contemplated their future production in the course of litigation. They may have been regarded as memorials of the piety and generosity of those who gave them rather than as instruments of protection for those who received them. Even if it be true, as is frequently maintained, that the delivery of a charter of itself transferred property in land, the charter seems to have operated in its intention as an instrument of conveyance, rather than as a weapon of protection. Throughout the Middle Ages the right to the possession of land depended primarily upon seisin. A charter may have been required when claiming a liberty or a franchise, but the production to the court of the diplomas of our Saxon kings seems to have been of no frequent occurrence in the Middle Ages.[1] Such liberties and franchises as were constantly being claimed in the thirteenth century were those which might have been granted by the Norman kings. The vague privileges often mentioned in the Saxon charters were not easily explained in the precise language of our mediaeval courts of law. They were poor foundations for claims in the king's courts. For the purpose of establishing rights, few inducements for forging Saxon charters can have prevailed in the Middle Ages. Where there was anything to gain by forgery a well-framed charter purporting to have been granted by one of the Norman kings would have been much more useful than several charters of the kings of Kent or Wessex. At present we know of no special motive for the forgery of the early charters of St. Austin's Abbey. With few exceptions they occur in a chartulary dating from the middle of the thirteenth century; and no reason has been cited for supposing that as a series they have been forged deliberately. On the other hand, many of the charters as we know them are undoubtedly corrupt in text. None of the originals still exists. In all probability some of them perished in the fire at the abbey in 1168,[2] 'in qua combustione multe codicelle antique perierunt'; and some may have perished at an even earlier date. The text in the chartularies may in several instances be derived from the last of a succession of bad copies. We must expect false names, wrong dates, interpolations, and omissions. Until these charters have undergone minute criticism, we can draw few safe inferences from them in matters of detail; but we shall probably not be far wrong in accepting them as in the main a good provisional basis for the history of the estates of the abbey.[1]

The abbey stood outside the walls of the city of Canterbury, among a small group of houses, fields, and buildings known as Langport, which formed the nucleus of its estates, and was sometimes described as Barton or Berton. Langport became, with the site itself, the property of the abbey by two charters of King Ethelbert, both of which Kemble held to be of doubtful authenticity. The earlier of them,[2] which conveyed the site, is of the two the more open to suspicion. It purports to have been granted in A. D. 605 and the eighth[3] indiction, and contains a very brief and vague statement of the boundaries. The other charter,[4] which also purports to have been granted in A. D. 605 and the eighth indiction, seems to relate to the land at Langport surrounding the abbey. Its attestation clause is obviously a later addition, and so also may be the detailed description of the boundaries. The earlier charter was confirmed by an inspeximus dated 18 July, 1326,[5] but is not found in the Red Book, the Julius manuscript, Thorne's chronicle, or the unprinted Lives of the Abbots. On the other hand,

[1] A considerable number of charters were undoubtedly forged in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries for the purpose of supporting pedigrees. As no such motive existed in the Middle Ages, or at any rate in the early Middle Ages, we must seek other explanations of the textual defects of numerous ancient charters confirmed by inspeximus. It should be noticed that such charters are almost always complete, though often much disfigured by misreadings of proper names. Now the desire for a confirmation by inspeximus would be especially strong when an original charter was damaged. It may therefore be suggested that the Chancery refused to confirm a charter unless a complete text were produced. If this were in fact the case, many apparently suspicious charters may have been reconstructed, in some instances in draft and in others by insertions or corrections in later ink on the original documents, in order to comply with a Chancery rule. This explanation is, of course, purely hypothetical; and it may be conceded that monastic historians were under a somewhat greater temptation to amend, inflate, and even to forge the charters of foundation of their houses than other charters. The desire to establish a remote origin for a favoured corporation appears to be as strong an instinct as the yearning for a long line of ancestors.

[2] B. 4, K. 2.

[3] In the inspeximus of 1326 the indiction is given as the fourth. The eighth indiction agrees with the year 605.

[4] B. 5, K. 3, J. 154. The text of this charter occurs in Thorne's chronicle (col. 1761), but without date or attestation. Birch gives 9 January, 605, as its date; but the document as printed by him gives the year and the indiction only. In the Julius manuscript the indiction is given as the sixth.

[5] Calendar of Charter Rolls, iii, p. 492.

the second charter, which was not confirmed, occurs in all these manuscripts; but in the Julius manuscript and the Lives the very suspicious clause of attestation is omitted, and the charter ends with the words 'Ego Athelbertus . . . confirmaui'.

Ethelbert also gave to the abbey property in the neighbourhood of Canterbury, of which the precise situation and extent has not been ascertained.[1] We may suspect that the date of the gift, as stated in some of our texts, 9 January, 605,[2] is an addition; it is inconsistent with some words[3] in one of its early clauses, namely, 'eo iam per decem quinquennia sceptrigera potestate potitus'. This is undoubtedly the charter which Gervase of Canterbury calls the 'priuilegium' of King Ethelbert, for it is expressly so called in the margin of the Julius manuscript. By it the king promised that he and all his successors should be buried in the abbey, and that no bishop or king should presume to usurp any power therein. We may easily believe that this clause may have been altered somewhat, when the monks were engaged in controversy with the archbishop. It is probably to this especially that Gervase[4] refers when he speaks of the charter as 'rasa et subscripta ac si esset emendata'. Having regard to the controversy, there is certainly no other clause in the charters of the abbey which would have offered such temptation to the monks for emendation. The description of the property comprised in this instrument is extremely vague, and perhaps this clause also is not in its original words. As recorded in the confirmation of 18 July, 1326, it reads:

> uillam nomine Sturigao, alio nomine dictam Cistelet, cum omnibus redditibus ei iure competentibus cum mancipiis siluis cultis uel incultis pratis pascuis paludibus fluminibus et contiguis ei maritimis terminis eam ex una parte cingentibus.

[1] B. 6, K. 4, J. 155.

[2] The concluding words of the charter (from which the date 605 is taken), 'Actum sane quadragesimo quinto anno regni nostri sub die v idus Ianuarii', are not found in the charter as inspected in 1326.

[3] If Ethelbert's reign began in 565, as the Chronicle states, and the charter were issued in the forty-fifth year, its date would be 610. If the reign began in 560, as Bede states, and the charter were granted in the fiftieth year, the date would also be 610. The corresponding indiction was the thirteenth, which may easily have been read as the eighth.

The difficulty is that Chislet and Sturry are not adjoining parishes; and though the 'vill' of Chislet may have been more extensive than the modern parish of that name, it could hardly have included Sturry.

We may notice that the Julius manuscript, though omitting the attestation clause of several early charters, contains the simple clause of attestation which we find in this charter as confirmed in 1326. Possibly the more elaborate clause, which occurs in some of our texts of Ethelbert's second charter, was based upon this, and was an addition to the original.

The next land acquired by the monks was at Northbourne in the hundred of Cornilo, where King Edbald, the son of Ethelbert, is said to have given them thirty 'aratra' in the year 618.[1] Haddan and Stubbs have described this charter as spurious, and Kemble has cast suspicion upon it by an asterisk. The chief objection to the document as we know it, is the clause of attestation immediately preceding the date at the end. It contains such expressions as 'Ego . . . astipulor', 'Ego . . . laudo et subscribo', and 'Ego . . . libenter corroboro', which are held to belong to a later age. These and the date must be additions to the original charter, if it is genuine. The whole clause, nevertheless, occurs in the document as confirmed on 18 July, 1326. On the other hand, the only part of the attestation clause found in the Julius manuscript is:

> Ego Laurencius gracia dei archiepiscopus signo sancte crucis sicut regem uidi facere hoc donum confirmo, and the date is entirely absent.

The motive of the compiler of this manuscript in omitting wholly or partially the attestation clauses of the earlier charters is doubtful. Possibly some of his texts were based upon copies in which there were no such clauses; or possibly he thought that in many cases the original clauses had been glossed or inflated. He can scarcely have omitted them solely for the sake of brevity, as he usually records the names of the witnesses to the charters of the Norman kings.

[1] B. 13, K. 6, J. 156. The indiction is given as the fourth in the inspeximus charter of 1326; but in the other texts as the sixth. Thorne states that the manor was given in 618 (col. 1768).]

Erconbert, the son and successor of Edbald, though he was the first king to destroy idols, conferred no property on the abbey. His son Egbert succeeded him, and he in turn seems to have been immediately succeeded by his brother Hlothhere, but the true succession of the kings of Kent, no less than their continuous occupation of the throne, at this period, is very doubtful. Hlothhere in the first year of his reign and the third indiction, that is to say in 675, gave the abbey land at Stodmarsh in the hundred of Downhampford [1] by the following description:

> terram trium aratrorum in marisco qui appellatur Stodmerch iuxta Fordeuuicum cum pratis campis siluis fontanis paludibus fluminibus et omnibus ad eandem pertinentibus rebus in ipsa quantitate sicut antiquitus predecessores mei reges praedicti libere tenuerunt.

This charter was never confirmed by inspeximus, nor is it found in the Julius manuscript; but there is no special reason for doubting its general tenor.

Hlothhere also granted some land in the Isle of Thanet to the abbess Aebbe, who will be mentioned again presently, and other land in the same island to the abbot of Reculver.[2] The original charter of the latter gift is now at the British Museum.[3]

In 686 Edric, the son of Egbert and the nephew and successor of Hlothhere, granted to the monks land at Stodmarsh [4] adjoining that which Hlothhere had granted them some years earlier. The property is thus described in his charter:

> ex una parte habet uadum quod appellatur Fordstreta publica in directum, et a parte alia flumen quod nominatur Stur, omnes terras sationales, cum pratis campis siluis fontanis uel mariscum quod appellatur Stodmersche cum omnibus ad supradictam terram aratrorum trium pertinentibus.

It is not quite clear from this description whether the land now conveyed contained three 'aratra', or whether the 'tria aratra' refer to Hlothhere's grant.

The next charter to be noticed presents many difficulties. It purports to have been granted in the month of July in the second indiction, and therefore either in the year 674 or 689, with the confirmation of the most clement King Ethelred, by one Oswyn, king of Kent.[1] It comprised :

> unum aratrum in quo mina ferri haberi cognoscitur quod pertinebat ad cortem que appellatur Lyminge, and the property is described as situate next the land of the abbot Berhtwald on the south.[2] This Berhtwald was abbot of Reculver and afterwards archbishop of Canterbury. Domesday Book records no land at Lyminge in the possession of St. Austin's, but the monks of Christ Church acquired Reculver before the Norman Conquest, and the archbishop was in possession of Lyminge in the reign of the Conqueror. Elmham identifies Oswin with Oswy, the king of Northumbria, who married Eanflaed, the daughter of Eadwine, king of Deira, and Ethelburga, sister of King Eadbald of Kent. This identification is scarcely possible, even if Oswy,[3] who is generally said to have died in 670, in fact died later. It would be surprising if Oswy, who was king of Northumbria, styled himself king of Kent, even if he intruded into Kent on the death of Egbert in 673. Another serious difficulty arises from the fact that Ethelred, by whose confirmation it was made, is generally taken to have succeeded to the throne of Mercia in 675, a year later than the earliest date of the charter ; but here again the accepted chronology may be erroneous. Ethelred, it should be noticed, married Oswy's daughter Osthryth, and is known to have ravaged Kent in the year 676. In spite of these difficulties, we can scarcely reject this charter as a mere forgery, for the property which it comprised was of no importance, and a skilled forger would almost certainly have made some well-known king of Kent appear to be the benefactor of the abbey.

Wihtred, the brother of Edric (who probably reigned jointly with one Swaebhard,[1] a benefactor of the church at Minster), was a warm supporter of the Christian religion. He granted various privileges to the churches of Kent, and, in conjunction with his wife Ethelburga, gave land at Littlebourne in the hundred of Downhampford to St. Austin's Abbey.[2] His charter is chiefly remarkable for its brevity, the lands comprised in it being described thus :

[1] B. 73, K. 30, J. 348, W. fol. 83 r°.

[2] The charter is subscribed by Sabertus, Ecca, and Osfrid, for whom see p. xxxiii below.

[3] All the manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle agree that Oswy died in 670; but the dates in the Chronicle are not always correct. Offa of the Mercians, for instance, is said to have died in 794, whereas it is almost certain that he died in 796.

> terram iuris nostri quinque aratrorum que appellatur Littelburne cum omnibus ad se pertinentibus.

Three persons only subscribed it, the king, Ethelburga the queen, and Gemund, bishop of Rochester. Gemund's attestation of this and another charter[3] by which Wihtred granted protection to his kinswoman Mildred, are in precisely the same words :

> Hoc ego Gemundus episcopus expressi.

Wihtred's long reign ended in 725, and we cannot determine with any certainty who were his immediate successors. If we could trust to the verbal accuracy of our texts, his son Eadbert in the thirty-sixth year of his reign gave to the abbey lands at Little Mongeham in the hundred of Cornilo.[4] The property of which it consisted is thus described :

> terram aratrorum sex in australi parte uici antiqui qui appellatur Mundelingeham, sicut a regibus Cantiae tempore pristino, et a nobis usque hactenus concessa, et possessa est . . . possidendam optuli cum campis siluis pratis pascuis et cum omni tributo quod regibus daretur, ut liberam habeant potestatem possidendi uel uendendi uel etiam tradendi cuicumque uoluerint. Terminos uero huius terre ideo non scribimus quia undique ab incolis sine dubitacionis scrupulo certi sunt ; et unius carri introitus in silua que appellatur Saenling.

The observation about the boundaries of this property seems

[1] According to Stubbs, Swaebheard may with great probability be identified with Swefred, son of the East Saxon King Sebbi (Dictionary of Christian Biography, iv. 1177).

[2] B. 90, K. 41, J. 159.

[3] B. 88, K. 39.

[4] B. 190, K. 107, J. 357. The charter is expressed to have been granted in the thirty-sixth year of Eadbert's reign. This king is also expressed to have granted another charter in the same regnal year (B. 189, K. 106). The names Edbert and Ethelbert may easily have been confused by monastic scribes.

more natural in a genuine charter than in one forged long after its date. It is just possible, however, that this charter has been wrongly ascribed to Eadbert, and that it was really granted by his brother Ethelbert. A year later (762) we have the confirmation[1] by Ethelbert of an exchange whereby the monastery allowed the royal vill or town of Wye to have the use of half a mill at Chart in return for rights of pasture in Andred's wood. This is our first information of the monastery possessing land at Chart. In the same year one Dunwold, who had been a minister of King Ethelbert, gave the abbey some land at Queensgate, Canterbury,[2] which he described by the word uilla, though it was evidently nothing but a plot of ground comprising less than an acre.[3] Thorne represents this land to have been given in 760, and Little Mongeham in 761; but he says nothing of Chart.

In 772 Kent had come under the sway of Mercia, and about that date, namely in the fifteenth year of his reign, Offa, king of the Mercians, granted to Ethelnoth, abbot of St. Austin's, land at Bewsfield in the hundred of Bewsborough.[4] His charter is remarkable on account of the word manens, which is not found in any of the earlier charters mentioned above. The land is described briefly[5] as > terram duorum manentium iuris mei in loco qui appellatur Beawesfeld cum certis terminibus . . . ut habeat et possideat cum campis et siluis uel omnibus ad se pertinentibus bonis et ad pascendum porcos et pecora et iumenta in silua regali eternaliter perdono; et unius capree licenciam in silua que uocatur Saenling.

The word capree in this charter is obviously an error for carre or carri, which also occurs in a similar clause in the extract

[1] B. 191, K. 108, J. 349. This and the next charter are not marked with an asterisk in Kemble's collection.

[2] B. 192, K. 109, J. 354, W. fol. 83 v°.

[3] The word 'uilla' is similarly used in B. 426 and K. 241.

[4] B. 207, K. 119, J. 358, W. fol. 84 v°. This charter purports to have been granted in the fifth year of the reign; but Kemble thinks that we have here a transcriber's error, and that it was granted in the fifteenth year. In the Julius manuscript it is stated to have been granted in the first year of the reign.

[5] The boundaries of this property are noted in English at the end of the charter.

from Eadbert's charter printed above.[1] It happens that this particular error is easily explained; but we cannot doubt that the obscurities of many early charters are caused by other less obvious errors of transcription, and are not due to the blunders of a monastic forger. Thorne was deceived by his text of this charter; following the author of the Lives of the Abbots, he says:[2]

> Et dedit ei licenciam pascendi porcos et pecora in silua regali eternaliter et unius caprae licenciam in silua que uocatur Snewlings ubi caprae regis uadunt.

It will be noticed that the wood is here called Snewlings and not Saenling.

Offa died in 796,[3] and after his son Egfrith had reigned for a few months, a distant kinsman, Cenwolf, succeeded to his throne of Mercia. The men of Kent then revolted under one Edbert Praen, whom they chose for their king. The revolt was soon suppressed, and Cenwolf created his brother Cuthred king or under-king of that province. In 804 Cenwolf and Cuthred joined in granting an estate in West Lenham[4] to their kinsman Cunred, abbot of St. Austin's, free from all secular service save expeditio, pontis instructio, and arcis munitio. The property is thus described in the charter:

> terram uiginti aratrorum in prouincia Cantie in loco qui uocatur Sethestraleanham[5] cum omnibus scilicet rebus ad eam recte et rite pertinentibus cum campis siluis pratis pascuis aquis iuxta antiquos terminos sicut antecessores eius comites habuerunt et tresdecim denberende on Andrede ad illam terram antiquo iure pertinentia.

In 826 Archbishop Wulfred and the house of Minster are stated by Thorne to have given to St. Austin's six acres of land at Dodingland in exchange for six other acres at Ealdanford.[6]

[1] A somewhat similar clause occurs in the charter of Ethelwolf, mentioned on p. xxix below. See also the clause in Eadbert's charter mentioned on p. xxv above.

[5] This name is obviously written in error for Se Westreleanham. In the Lives of the Abbots (Tiberius MS. A. ix) it is actually written as 'Se Westre Lenham'. According to the same authority, the gift was made to Wernode, who is described as consanguineus Athelwulfi.

[6] B. 851 and 1337, J. 279. Cotton MS., Claudius D. x, fol. 185 b.

A version of Wulfred's charter occurs in the Julius manuscript, but without date or subscriptions, and its text is not very satisfactory. A much better text, giving the date as 27 March, 826, and the subscription of Wulfred and four others, will be found in the Red Book of St. Austin's.

We next come to a gift made in 836[1] by Egbert, king of the West Saxons, with the consent and licence of his son Ethelwolf, king of the Kentishmen, to one Ciaba, a clerk dwelling in St. Austin's Abbey.[2] The property comprised in his charter was to go after his death to the monks, and is thus described :

> aliquam partem terre iuris nostri . . . id est unius aratri in illo loco qui nominatur On Scirdon et antea pertinebat ad regalem uillam Dorouernie ciuitatis.

Neither Thorne nor Elmham mention this charter, nor is anything known of Ciaba. It was probably in a bad state of preservation when the transcript was made on which the text in the Julius manuscript is based, for the latter ends with the words :

> his autem testibus consentientibus et signo sancte crucis Cristi confirmantibus quorum hic nomina subterius in cedula probabiliter[3] continentur :

but the names of these confirming witnesses are not added. In the Chronologia Augustinensis[4] the words 'On Scirdon' have been read as 'Duchirdoune'; but in the Lives of the Abbots[5] it is admitted that Scirdon was unknown to its author. He remarks, > que sit ista terra de Scirdun nullus modernorum commemorat eo quod uicissitudo temporum nomina locorum antiqua non tam corrupit quam mutauit.

We may here notice that Thorne mentions a gift by King Ethelwolf to the abbot Wernode[6] of five 'aratra' at Lenham,[7]

[1] This date agrees with the fourteenth indiction given in the charter; but according to the Lives of the Abbots the charter was made in 848.

[2] B. 852, J. 355, W. fol. 84 r°.

[3] This word is omitted in the text of the charter recorded in the White Book.

[4] Elmham, p. 15. [5] Tiberius A. ix, fol. 115.

[6] It seems probable that Wernode and Diernode are one and the same person. In the Lives of the Abbots Wernode succeeded Cunred in 822, and was himself succeeded by Diernode in 844. In the same year it is stated that Winhere succeeded Diernode in 844 and died in 866. [7] Thorne, col. 1776.

and states further that this land was called in his day East Lenham, that it lay between Shelve and Lenham, and that the gift was made on 3 March, 838. The charter is entered in the Julius manuscript,[1] but without date or names of witnesses.

Ethelwolf also gave to the abbot Winhere, by a charter dated 16 November, 845, land at Lillecesora by this description :[2] > aliquantulam partem terre iuris mei in orientali parte Cantie, id est unum aratrum in illo loco qui ab incolis Lyncesore nominatur cum campis siluis omnibusque rebus intus et foris ad se rite et recte pertinentibus.

This property is now known as Linchsore and is situate in the parish of Bewsfield and hundred of Bewsborough.

We also have two versions of a charter by which Ethelwolf granted to the monks land at Lenham in 850, and this land is probably at East Lenham.[3] In one clause the two copies differ from one another considerably, but there is no reason for thinking that the difference is due to anything but bad reading. One copy, however, is fuller than the other, and contains the boundaries of the property and the attestation clause, which are entirely omitted in the other. The description of the property in both charters is as follows :

> in ulla que nuncupatur Leanham, id est XL cassatos ut habeat et perfruatur quamdiu sub astrifero celo uitam duxerit cum omnibus utilitatibus ad eam pertinentibus campis siluis pratis pascuis piscariis et loco in quo sal adipisci potest et cum gressu trium carrorum in silua que dicitur Blean.

In this we may notice the word cassatus, which has not

[1] J. 204.

[2] B. 853, J. 286, W. fol. 86 v°. The date given in the Lives of the Abbots is 865, but 845 agrees with the eighth indiction given in the charter. It appears from the text in W. that this charter was witnessed by 'Ethelstan rex'. This must be the son of Egbert and brother of Ethelwolf. The Chronicle (Bodl. Laud. 636), under A. D. 836, says :

> Aeþelstan his oþer sunu feng to Cantwara rice & to Suðrigan & to Suð Seaxna rice.

Three manuscripts make him king of Essex also. This Ethelstan witnessed B. 426 and B. 460.

[3] B. 854 and B. 459, the former being from the Red Book. The other references to the second version are K. 1049 and J. 359. The date given in the Lives of the Abbots is 840, but 850 agrees with the indiction given in the charter. According to the Lives of the Abbots, the gift was made to Wernode.

occurred in any of the earlier Kentish charters, but is common enough in those of Wessex and Mercia.

In 861 Ethelbert, the son of Ethelwolf, granted to Diernoth, then abbot of St. Austin's, three aratra in a place called Meretun[1] by the description :

> aliquam partem terre iuris mei, hoc est tria aratra in illo loco qui nominatur Meretun in orientali parte regionis Cantie.

The general words which have appeared with a few small variations in so many of these early charters are not found here ; but we have instead > liberam per omnia habeat potestatem cum omnibus utilitatibus rite ac recte ad eandem terram pertinentibus.

The land is also freed by the charter from all secular service nisi sola expeditione. It is not known where 'Meretun' was situate. Thorne describes it as in orientali plaga Cantie ; but plaga is perhaps an error for parte.

The next royal gift was made by King Athelstan on the day of his consecration, which is here stated to have been 4 September, 925.[2] He thereby restored the land of fourteen aratra in the Isle of Thanet called Werburginland, which had unjustly been detained from St. Austin's for many years. We have no charter which tells us how the abbey had originally acquired this land ; and none was known when Thorne wrote his chronicle. We cannot even identify the land called Werburginland, but the statement that the abbey had for a long time possessed a substantial estate in the Isle of Thanet is of some interest. Our knowledge of this transaction is derived, not from any charter or transcript of a charter, but from a memorandum occurring in the Red Book of the abbey and the Julius manuscript. The gift is there stated to have been made with the consent of eight bishops, whose names are given, but mostly in corrupt forms, in the Red Book only. It is possible that the original charter would not have justified the

[1] B. 855, J. 356.

[2] B. 641, J. 278. This charter is not printed by Kemble. The Julius manuscript gives this date, and names Adlem and one Alla as consenting bishops and none others. According to Florence of Worcester Adlem crowned Athelstan, but it is usually stated that Adlem died (before the coronation) on 8 January, 923.

words in insula Thanet of the memorandum, and that the fourteen aratra lay outside the Isle of Thanet. The mere fact that several of the bishops, by whose consent the gift is said to have been made, cannot be recognized, affords no evidence that their names were forged. It seems rather to be a case of their being wrongly transcribed ex scriptorum negligentia uel ex compilatoris legendi Saxonicam scripturam imperitia.

Athelstan's brother and successor Edmund was the next royal benefactor of St. Austin's. In the year 944 he gave to the abbot, who was one of his household, two aratra at Shebbertswell in the hundred of Bewsborough.[1] The general words in his charter are:

> cum omnibus utensilibus que Deus celorum in ipsa telluris gramine creauerit tam in notis causis quam et ignotis in modicis et in magnis campis pascuis siluis omnino donans libertatem.

According to Thorne, this gift was made not to Sigeric, who is named in our version of the charter, but to an abbot named Alric.

Thorne also states that King Ethelred afterwards added two cassati to this land. Ethelred's charter,[2] dated 990 and the third indiction, occurs in the Julius manuscript. The gift is there described as > quandam michi ab eo telluris particulam mirabiliter concessam meo fideli ministro Sigeredo, id est, duorum cassatorum in loco que solicole Syrbeortesweald uocant cum pratis pascuis omnibusque ad eam rite pertinentibus.

Sigered[3] was probably the abbot of that name who succeeded Elfnoth in 980 and became successively bishop of Ramsbury (985) and archbishop of Canterbury (990). There is reason for thinking that he remained abbot of St. Austin's after he was consecrated a bishop, for although at this period such an instance of pluralism may have been unusual, it cannot be overlooked that in the Lives of the Abbots, Wulfric, Sigeric's successor at [1] B. 755, K. 1132, J. 275, W. fol. 85 r°. In the White Book of the abbey, the gift is made to Siricus and is subscribed by Edred the king's brother and Edgiua the queen. This charter was confirmed by the inspeximus of 18 July, 1326.

[3] Sigered, Siric, and Sigeric seem to be variants of the same name.

St. Austin's, is stated to have been blessed by Sigeric himself, then archbishop of Canterbury.

This gift is not made to Sigeric as abbot, but to Sigered the king's servant, and for his life only, with power to leave it to whom he would. He may therefore have received the land when already archbishop, and have afterwards left it to the abbey. In the White Book the charter is subscribed by the archbishop:

> Ego Ethelredus rex Anglorum proprie manus impressione signaui ✠ Ego Sigericus Dorobernensis archiepiscopus subscripsi ✠

The subscription, however, by Sigeric may be of a later date than the charter. The land at Shebbertswold was demised in fee by the Abbot Scoland to Hugh fitz Fulbert soon after the Norman Conquest.[1]

Edred, who succeeded his brother Edmund in 946, gave in that year to one of his men, Heresige by name, some property at Swalecliffe in the hundred of Bleangate,[2] and Heresige gave this land to St. Austin's,[3] the memorandum of his gift being written at the end of Edred's charter. In the charter to Heresige the property is thus described:

> mansam et dimidiam . . . ubi ruricoli antiquo usu nomen inposuerunt Aet Swalewanclife eatenus ut . . . istud ab omni seculari seruitio exinanitum cum omnibus ad se rite pertinentibus campis pascuis pratis siluis excepto istis tribus expeditione pontis arcisue constructione.

This is the first charter in which we have the word mansa in place of the usual aratrum. This charter occurs in the Julius manuscript and the Red Book.[4] In the former the boundaries and the names of those who subscribed it are omitted, no doubt for the sake of brevity. In the latter the important words 'excepto istis tribus expeditione pontis arcisue constructione' are omitted, perhaps intentionally. The memorandum at the end of the charter is found in the Red Book only.

The next royal benefactor of the abbey was King Edgar, who gave it land at Plumstead in the hundred of Little and Lessness.[1] This is described as terram quatuor aratrorum que nominatur Plumstede, and the charter is noteworthy for containing no exemption from secular services. According to Thorne, Godwin, earl of Kent, fraudulently took this land from the monks and gave it to his son Tostig. It was restored to them by Edward the Confessor, but was again taken from them by Odo, bishop of Bayeux and earl of Kent. The Conqueror, however, caused its restitution to the abbey. Edgar's charter is undated, but Thorne attributes it to the year 960.

We now come to Cnut's famous gift. By a charter without date and with no witnesses, but confirmed by the inspeximus of 18 July, 1326, he gave to St. Austin's the body of St. Mildred, the glorious virgin, with all her land within and without the Isle of Thanet, and with all customs pertaining to her church. Thorne and Elmham note in chronological order the chief gifts to the church of Minster from its foundation ; and the charters by which they were made are entered in the Julius manuscript and the White Book at the Record Office. First we have a charter of one Oswin, king of the Kentishmen (who has already been mentioned on an earlier page), dated 27 January in the second year of his reign and the third indiction, by which he granted to the abbess Aebbe certain land [2] called ' Sturrie '.

> id est decem manentes ex ea cum siluis et campis ac paludibus cum fluminibus ac fontibus cum pratis ac pomariis et cum omnibus utensilibus in ipsa quantitate sicut principes a regibus antiquitus perdonatam possederant.

The charter expressly states that the gift was made > in presencia principum meorum qui ad presens haberi possunt, hoc est, Cantuariorum quos iure ac propria nostra potestate adipiscimur.

These words tend to confirm the view that Oswin, whoever he was, had come to the throne of Kent from some other province. His charter was subscribed by Oswin himself, Theodore the archbishop, Adrian the abbot, and three persons named Suebhard, Ecca, and Osfrid respectively.[3] If Oswin's charter was granted in the third indiction its date must have been 675 or 690. The latter date is perhaps the more likely to be correct ;

[1] B. 1173, K. 562, J. 163. [2] B. 35, K. 8, J. 264, W. fol. 80 v°.
[3] In the text in J. it is subscribed by Theodore and Oswin only.

and if so he was doubtless one of the foreign kings who usurped the Kentish realm on the death of Edric. Bede's statement about these unnamed kings is as follows :

> ac post eum idem Edric anno uno ac dimidio regnauit ; quo defuncto regnum illud per aliquod temporis spatium reges dubii uel externi disperdiderunt, donec legitimus rex Victred, id est filius Ecgberti . . . gentem suam ab extranea inuasione liberaret.

It should be noticed, however, that the charter by which Lothaire, king of Kent, granted land at Stodmarsh to the monks of St. Austin's, was subscribed by the same persons and in the same words, except that Lothaire's name is substituted for Oswin's and Swaebhard's is omitted.

By another charter,[1] unfortunately without date but witnessed by Swaebhard and Ecca, Oswin granted to the abbess Ebbe some land in the Isle of Thanet containing eighteen manentes, which was formerly in the possession of Irminred, and part of which belonged to the archbishop.[2] This reference to Irminred, perhaps the elder brother of Erconbert, king of Kent, seems to imply that Oswin considered him to be the last lawful possessor of the property, Erconbert and his descendants having forfeited their rights to it by their crimes against the sons of Eorminred. He also claimed the throne of Kent by descent, for he uses the words ' deo omnipotenti qui confirmauit me in regno patrum meorum et dedit mihi domum cognacionis mee '. The text of this charter is not free from corruption ;[3] and possibly the reference is not to Eorminred the brother of Erconbert, but to the Irminred who witnessed another charter[4] of this period.

The next benefactor of Minster was a certain king of the Kentishmen called Swaebhard, who was probably the person who witnessed the charters of Oswin, just mentioned ; and possibly the Sabert who subscribed Oswin's grant to St. Austin's mentioned on an earlier page. By the undated charter now in discussion, Swaebhard gave to the nuns at Minster two aratra in Sturry and three in Botdesham, which seems to be the place now called Bodsom Green in the parish of Elmstead and hundred of Stowting.[1] The charter is not dated, but is subscribed by Swaebhard, Ecca, and a person named Gumberct.[2]

Swaebhard also (by the advice of Archbishop Theodore, and with the consent of his magnates, and also by the advice and with the consent of his father King Sebbe) granted to Aebbe, by a charter dated (according to our printed text) 1 March, 676, the land which is called 'In Sudaneie' in the Isle of Thanet, containing forty-four manentes, together with a court containing twelve manentes in Sturry.[3] The property is thus described:

> terram que dicitur In Sudaneie intra insulam Thanet; que et continet antiquo iure XLIIII manentes quibus modo addidimus curtem XII manentes habentem ultra insulam in loco qui dicitur Sturgeh, cum siluis et paludibus cum fluminibus et fontibus cum pratis et pomariis cum domibus cunctisque utensilibus et omnibus ad eandem pertinentibus in ipsa quantitate sicut antiquitus principes a regibus sibi perdonatam habuerant:

words which closely resemble those by which Oswin had granted to Aebbe ten manentes in Sturry. In fact, the two charters are in much the same language throughout.

This charter was subscribed, like the last, by Swaebhard himself, King Sebbe, Ecca, Theodore the archbishop, Adrian the abbot, and Oswin,[4] who, however, is not here described as 'rex Cancie'. It concludes with the words:

> Signum manus Aedilredis regis Merciorum dum ille infirmauerat terram nostram in hoc loco erat qui dicitur Mirafeld atque Stapulford.
> Anno ab incarnatione DCLXXVI, indictione quarta, VIII die mensis Ianuarii, prima feria.

Ethelred of Mercia is said to have invaded Kent in 676; and it may have been to Ethelred's influence that Swaebhard owed

[2] It is not subscribed by Ecca and Gumberct in the text in J. The clause reads as follows in W.:

his throne. Thorne explains that 'Suebhard' had obtained the kingdom of Kent by violence; and Bede speaks of a King Swaebhard who was ruling jointly with Wihtred in 692; but as he makes no mention of a king of that name reigning in Kent in 676, the charters have for that and other reasons been treated as spurious. It happens, however, that a better text of this charter occurs in the White Book of the abbey now at the Public Record Office. This concludes with the words

> Signum manus Edredi regis Merciorum dum ille adfirmauerat terram nostram. In hoc loco erat qui dicitur Wrafeld atque Stapulford anno ab incarnacione Cristi DCXCI indiccione quarta viii die mensis Ianuarii prima feria.

The reading in this manuscript strongly favours the authenticity of the charter. It brings the year, the indiction, and the day of the month into harmony, and it represents Swaebhard as reigning no more than a year earlier than the date given by Bede. It should also be noticed that an important passage (though probably an interpolation) is omitted in the text printed by Kemble.

> Hec autem terra antea per Lotarium et Edricum reges Cantuariorum tantum accommodata sub dominio famulancium deo iacebat, postea autem a Mulo rege regnum Kancie optinente perdonata est in ius ecclesiasticum, dicta abbatissa XLIIII manentes comparante ab eo ipsa sua pecunia digna, ex quibus sunt intra insulam tenet XLIIII manentes, extra autem eam insulam X manentes sunt in his regionibus qui hoc modo nominantur, id est in Sturige et ut nos solemus dicere ad aquilonis siluam ut dicitur Maeccam Brooc.

If this passage formed no part of the original charter, it is almost certainly an early addition explaining its intention, and as such is of no little interest.

Wihtred, already noticed as a benefactor of St. Austin's, also granted lands to St. Mildred's. With his wife Kynigitha he gave, by a charter dated 17 July, 694, land in the isle of Thanet of four aratra, sometime called Humantun:[1] > cum omnibus ad eandem pertinentibus pratis campis fontanis siluis piscariis fluminibus marisco et quicquid ad supradictam terram pertinet a quatuor partibus orientis occidentis aquilonis et meridiei.

[1] B. 86, K. 37, J. 266, W. fol. 81 v°. The date is given as in the third year of the reign and the seventh indiction.

The Lives of the Abbots describe this land as situate at the place formerly called Humantune, but then by 'corruption of the name' known as Upmanton and Ledene.

Three years later, with the consent of another wife, Ethelburga, and Archbishop Berhtwald, Wihtred granted the land named Haeg, of forty manentes,[1] to the abbess Aebbe. There is unfortunately some little difficulty in accepting the text of this charter in its present form; for it is expressed to have been granted to the abbess Aebbe in April in the sixth year of the reign of Wihtred, whereas by an earlier charter, dated at Berkhamistede in February 696 in the fifth year of his reign, that king had confirmed certain privileges to the abbess Mildred.[2] Moreover, the names of some of the witnesses of Aebbe's charter of April 696 are not found elsewhere. The discrepancy in dates and the strange names of the witnesses may be due to our text having been taken from a document transcribed from a much damaged copy or original. Though not stated in the charter, it seems probable that the place called Haeg was in the Isle of Thanet. Wihtred's two charters contain (if we treat manentes and aratra as synonymous) precisely the same quantity of land as that granted by Swaebhard in Insudaneye in Thanet.

We now come to two charters granted by Wihtred's sons Eadbert and Ethelbert. By a charter dated 11 July in the seventh indiction and the thirty-third year of the reign of Wihtred, Ethelbert, with his father's consent, granted to the abbess Mildred the land of one aratrum about the river Liminge and three acres of meadow at Hammespot.[3] Eadbert's charter[4] grants to Mildred half an aratrum 'bi-Northanwde',[5] by a charter dated 14 October, 724, in the tenth indiction. If the indiction is correct, the year must be 727; but if the number of the indiction has been wrongly copied, the 14 October, 724, may be the true date. The two charters so closely resemble one another that Eadbert's must have been based either upon Ethelbert's or upon a common original.

These eight charters are found in the Julius manuscript and in the White Book, as well as in Elmham's chronicle. Kemble, who has printed all of them save Eadbert's charter in his Codex Diplomaticus, has marked them with asterisks to signify that they are suspicious. As regards their texts, they are certainly not altogether satisfactory. It would indeed be surprising if they were. The Isle of Thanet was ravaged by the Danes in 1011, or perhaps earlier, when the church of St. Mildred was burnt. It is therefore as likely as not that the charters of the monastery were never known to the monks of St. Austin's save through transcripts. A few textual difficulties afford little ground for dismissing the whole series of charters as mere forgeries. What, indeed, had the monks to gain by forging them? They were never, as far as is known, used in actual litigation, nor for the purpose of opposing definite claims. And if fraud had been contemplated as a weapon of defence, would not King Egbert's lost foundation charter of Minster itself have been fabricated? Should we have as the leading forgeries two charters of a King Oswin whose very existence has been denied by distinguished modern historians? Would these in turn have been followed by two charters of a King Swaebhard who is barely mentioned by Bede and the compilers of the Saxon Chronicle?[1] And if they had been forged, would they not have been so dated and attested as to raise as few chronological difficulties as possible? Lastly, the purport of the charters themselves is much more obscure than we should expect them to be if they had really proceeded from the pen of a forger. Oswin grants ten manentes in Sturry, and then eighteen manentes in Thanet. There is, however, a possibility that the xviii of our documents is an error for xliiii.[2] Swaebhard, the next benefactor, grants two aratra or manentes in Sturry and three in Botdesham. By a subsequent charter he grants forty-four manentes in Thanet and twelve in Sturry.[3] Possibly,

[1] Anglo-Saxon Chronicle (No. 23 in the Rolls Series), i. 65.

[2] The li in the xliiii may have been read as v.

[3] The words in the charter, as recorded in the Julius manuscript and the White Book (p. xxxvi above), suggest that ten manentes only were comprised in Swaebhard's charter.

as regards Sturry, his charter is in the nature of a confirmation of Oswin's gift and his own: and it may be that Swaebhard's charter was intended to operate as a confirmation of a grant by Oswin of forty-four manentes, or (if there has been no wrong reading in Oswin's charter) as a confirmation of eighteen manentes in Thanet and a new grant of twenty-six more. Similarly, we might take Wihtred's two charters as a confirmation of Swaebhard's gift of forty-four manentes in Thanet. But documents operating in such devious ways would scarcely have been within the contemplation of a forger. He would surely have put forward a series of simple charters by which the church of St. Mildred had acquired its property; and he would have avoided such names as In Sudaneie, Haeg, and Humantun, which are not mentioned in any charters granted after the Norman Conquest.

Cnut's grant[1] of the church and lands of Minster to St. Austin's was confirmed by Edward the Confessor. That king's charter[2] contains no reference to Cnut, but is a general confirmation of part of the Isle of Thanet, and all donations made to the abbey by his royal predecessors. The document is chiefly remarkable for incorporating a brief statement of the legend of the foundation of Minster. It tells us that Ethelred and Ethelbert had been murdered by one Thunor at the command of King Egbert, and that he on this account had granted their sister, the venerable Queen Domneva, as much of the Isle of Thanet as a hind had delimited by its course. This is the first mention in history of the legend of the hind. It is remarkable that we hear of it in little more than three hundred years after the foundation of the church. The charter contains no assertion that Ebbe, the first abbess of Minster, was the same person as Queen Domneva, nor that this queen became an abbess, statements that were subsequently incorporated in the history of Minster. If, however, the charters in the names of Oswin and Swaebhard are really forgeries, it is surprising that the first abbess was named Ebbe in them and not Domneva, as in Edward the Confessor's charter.

The same king by an English charter[3] also gave his land within Fordwich to St. Austin's. By another charter[1] he gave an aratrum at Littlebourne in the hundred of Downhampford to Eadzi, archbishop of Canterbury, for the term of his life, with power to leave it to whom he would thereafter, and the archbishop gave the property to the abbey.[2] This is the last royal gift to St. Austin's made before the Norman Conquest; but between the years 1050 and 1054 Aegelric Bigga left them by his will[3] land at Bottsham and Wilrintone subject to the life interests of two legatees. Bottsham or Bodsom,[4] as already stated, lay in the hundred of Stowting, and Wilrintone may be identified with Wilderton in the parish of Throwley and hundred of Faversham.

Certain other private benefactors, whose charters are found in none of the abbey registers, are mentioned by Thorne. He tells us[5] that in the time of Abbot Diernod, one Wymond, a friend of King Ethelwolf, gave it Snaves by the description of 'terram de Borewarmers cum terra de Wyk'. In another paragraph[6] he says that Edbald (though Ethelbald is perhaps meant), the king's 'nephew', in return for 800 pence, gave to his friend Wymond a portion of land in a place called Bourewaremersse, which Wymond afterwards gave to St. Austin's. He adds that 'Folcanstone' lies to the south and 'Lymene' to the north of this land. The manor of Snavewick or Snave is in the hundred of Aloesbridge, but Burmarsh, which is in the hundred of Worth, lies some six miles to the west of Snave. Both places are within the boundaries of Romney Marsh; and the abbey certainly possessed property in both places at a later date.

A charter granted by one Edbald to Wynemond is recorded in the Julius manuscript,[7] but it makes Thorne's conflicting statements appear even more obscure. By this charter Edbald sells to Wynemond for eight hundred pence certain land by this description:

> in loco qui dicitur Burwastamers Halfsaeta, necnon et illud agellum hiis terminibus circumcinctum est in oriente Suth-saxaland in meredie terra Folcanstaninga in occidentale regis terra in aquilone Limenaea . . .

Hoc ipsum agellum ab omni seculari difficultate et aduersitatibus intus et foris notis et ignotis maioribus minoribus quamdiu cristiana fides in terra seruetur eternaliter permaneat liberum [1]. . .

This is obviously the gift mentioned by Thorne in his second paragraph about Burmarsh ; and it seems clear from the context that Edbald, the king's nephew, was at the date of the charter himself a king. The difficulty about this charter is that Burmarsh cannot possibly be described as lying either between Lyminge [2] and Folkestone or between Lympne and Folkestone. The words 'in oriente Suthsaxaland' also are not easily to be explained, and the document as a whole needs the attention of a local antiquary.

We may also notice the land at Willsborough, in the hundred of Chart, called Atelesworth, and other land at Hinxhill in the same hundred, of which the monastery was deprived in the time of William the Conqueror by the powerful Hugh de Montfort.[3] These estates were left to the monks by one Ethelferth in the reign of Alfred. Other land at Willsborough was bought about the same time from one Eadulf the son of Edwold for two thousand pence. A lady named Wynflaed gave it one thousand acres of land at or near Mongeham, described as lying to the north of the court of Northbourne and to the west of Mongeham. This gift was made by the licence of King Edgar, and was witnessed by Archbishop Dunstan. Edward of Combe, whose son Leofard was a monk of St. Austin's, and who seems to have died at the end of the tenth century, left to the monastery some land at Combe in the parish of Brabourne and hundred of Birchold barony ; and about the same time a certain Brithtric left it land at 'Woderingebourne',[4] which has aliquam terram iuris sui pro eius pecunia que ab eo accepit, hoc est viii hund. peniga in loco qui dicitur Berewaremersch Alfseata de consensu Ethelwlfi regis et Ceolnothi archiepiscopi.

[2] It is doubtful whether 'Limenaea' is Lyminge five miles north-west of Folkestone or Lympe close to Burmarsh. Perhaps the Folcanstaninga of the charter is not the Folkestone of to-day.

[3] Thorne, col. 1777.

[4] It is called 'Thorderongbeorne' on fol. 9 of the White Book.

not been identified. Finally, in the time of Abbot Elmer, who succeeded Wulfric in 1006, one Godwold left it one hundred acres of land 'apud Sturtune ex parte boreali', another place which has not been identified.

After the Norman Conquest the estates of the abbey increased but little. King Henry II gave it two seventh parts of the manor of Newington in the hundred of Folkestone; Reynold of Cornhill and Maud, his widow, gave it property of considerable value in Canterbury, and also the Abbot's Inn in Southwark; but the other private benefactors for the most part made small additions to the estates of the abbey. Their charters, together with numerous fines and indentures, are found in the large and handsome volume known as the 'Red Book' of St. Augustine's, now at the British Museum; some of these also occur with others in the latter part of the Black Book, which will be printed as the second volume of the present work.

With the exception of Plumstead, the estates of the abbey acquired before the Norman Conquest lay in the eastern part of the county, and within twenty miles of the city of Canterbury. Even at the time of the dissolution of the monasteries they comprised no land or houses outside Kent, except in London and Southwark. The servants of the abbey would in all probability have been unfamiliar with the agrarian conditions of other counties, and are likely to have been conservative in matters of Kentish usage. In this they would not have differed from their neighbours, for the conservatism of the Kentish farmers is notorious. The persistent use, for instance, of the 'turnwrest plough', by which the furrows were all turned in the same direction, has often been observed. Long-continued possession of estates also tends to permanence in agrarian practice. With the exception of Newington, their most important estates had been in the possession of the abbey for more than two hundred years before the custumaries in the Black Book were written. It is for this reason that the long series of Kentish charters already noticed in this introduction requires consideration. It claims a place in any investigation of the peculiarly Kentish measures of land known as the sulung and the yoke, or in such rights in the woods as danger and drovedene, which are not found in other counties; but they cannot be used for such a purpose unless it be clear that they are untainted by forgery and in the main authentic documents, though perhaps disfigured here and there by careless copying and well intentioned but unscholarly emendation.

Now in some of the charters of St. Austin's there are certainly suspicious subscriptions; in some the gifts are ascribed to kings whose existence has been doubted; and in some, again, the dates seem to be incorrect or inexplicable. These, however, are not insuperable difficulties; for in charters which may well have been copied repeatedly during many centuries, and which are known to us through late copies only, grave errors in transcription and strange interpolations should be expected; we may almost regard them as a matter of course. If we are to denounce some of our early charters as forgeries on account of such defects as these, we may reasonably ask for what purpose they were forged. The one feature which seems to be common to them is their great antiquity. It is possible that the earliest charters were lost or destroyed, even before the great fire of the year 1168.[1] If, however, the monks intended to replace them by forgeries, they surely would have taken pains to make the situation and extent of the lands granted as clear as possible; they would have attributed the gifts to kings whose names were to be found in the Saxon Chronicle; and, above all, they would have avoided impossible or inconsistent dates. We cannot, for instance, seriously believe that the obscure charter attributed to 'Adbaldus' was the best effort a monastic forger could make to account for his house possessing lands at Burmarsh and Snaves. And if it were thought desirable to replace lost documents by forgeries, why have we no charter at all recording the grant of the important manor of Kennington in the hundred of Chart?

To dismiss these early charters as forgeries is to raise a host of new and not easily explained difficulties.[2] Their glaring

[2] It may here be observed that in the Middle Ages ancient charters of the northern monasteries were almost unknown. They are supposed to have been destroyed in the Danish invasions. The monks of the north were evidently not accustomed to forge the royal charters, which they lacked, and we may well doubt whether the monks of the south adopted such a practice. They were certainly under no greater temptation to do so than their northern brethren.

defects themselves suggest that they were ultimately, though in some cases remotely, based upon genuine originals. For the purpose of the investigation which follows, the value of the charters lies not so much in small points of detail as in their general purport and phraseology. As in the case of other collections of Kentish charters they disclose no well-defined differences in political conditions between Kent and the rest of England. If the men of Kent were more free than other Englishmen, there is nothing in the charters to indicate that they were so. The one marked feature of the Kentish charters is the constant use of aratrum as a measure of land, a use which is not to be noticed in other counties. From the earliest times Kent seems to have enjoyed measures of its own; and they suggest that the Jutes adopted some distinctive system of agrarian settlement in Kent, and that the Kentish liberties which we find at a later date are due to this settlement rather than to grants of liberties by Kentish or Saxon kings.

(Folio 6, r°.) Sciant[2] omnes tam posteri quam presentes quod Willelmus filius Willelmi de Elinton et Radulfus frater suus dimiserunt hereditatem suam de duabus villis Burne et Wilrintone sicut de gauelikende in curia sancti Augustini in presencia domini Rogeri electi eiusdem ecclesie et plurimorum monacorum et laycorum et Radulfus releuauit in eadem curia partem suam. Ipse vero Radulfus de medietate istarum duarum villarum fecit homagium abbati sicut[3] de villenagio et reddet de Burne gabulum quinquaginta solidos, quatuor terminis anni, Dominica, videlicet, Palmarum, xij*s.* vj*d.*, in Natiuitate sancti Iohannis tantundem, ad festum sancti Michaelis tantundem, ad festum sancti Thome ante Natale Domini tantundem et tantundem seruicii quantum ad idem villenagium pertinet, faciet; similiter de medietate de Wilrinton idem Radulfus alios quinquaginta solidos eodem modo et eisdem terminis reddet cum seruicio. Ego, autem, Rogerus Dei gracia electus beati Augustini Cantuariensis eiusdemque loci conuentus hanc partem sue hereditatis presentis carte et sigilli ecclesie nostre [testimonio] eidem Radulfo confirmamus. Hiis testibus quorum nomina subscripta sunt, Willelmo filio Nigelli, Elya de Silingheld, Radulfo de sancto Leodagario, Radulfo de Creye, Eylgaro de Esturee, Hugone Cofin, Stephano de Kenardinton, Alano de Reding, Daniele de Wyuelesberhe, Hamone de Sotford, Hamone de Aldelose, Alano de Legh, Rogero de Wadenhale et pluribus aliis.

[3] 16 July, 1268. The feast of St. Mildred was celebrated on 13 July (Christopher Wordsworth, Ancient Kalendar of the University of Oxford, xx). It has been stated that her deposition was celebrated at St. Augustine's on 20 February (Dict. Nat. Biog. xxxvii. 377). This, however, was the day of the month on which the body of the saint was translated for the last time in 1262 (Chronica W. Thorn, 1905). A bull of Urban VI which is not mentioned in the Calendar of Papal Letters directed that the feast of St. Mildred the virgin should be celebrated as a double feast in Thanet (Historia monasterii S. Augustini, No. 8 in Rolls Series, p. 68).

Three entries from the rolls of the courts held at Minster on 11 May, 15 June and 14 July 1388[3] respectively. The two first entries are orders to distrain William Crowe for relief and fealty in arrear, and to answer to the lord for the detention of muniments. The third entry records the appearance of William Crowe, who gives gage for his relief and does fealty.

[2] The enrolment of these proceedings has not been found.

[3] This word occurs nowhere else in the chartulary in this extended form.

[4] The correct extension of this word is very doubtful. Having regard to the heading of the section, it should probably be extended as 'auertrull', see, however, the next note and note 2, p. 49, below. It should also be remembered that it is difficult to distinguish between the letters c and t in this MS. At the top of this fo. Chistelet.

The record of a case of trespass quare vi et armis brought in the Common Bench in Hilary term, 15 Ric. II, by the abbot against Thomas Court, for felling trees at Chistelet on 4 October, 1389. As to the vi et armis, the defendant pleads not guilty and issue is joined. As to the felling he says that the locus in quo was his own soil and frank tenement. The abbot replies that it is his own soil and frank tenement in right of his church. Issue is joined and process being continued a verdict is given on the octave of Trinity, 18 Ric. II, for the abbot, with forty shillings damages.[2]

[1] If a 'day-work' be taken as a fortieth part of an acre, this addition is incorrect.

[2] This record occupies part of fo. 54 v° the whole of fo. 55 r° and eleven lines of fo. 55 v°.

Sciant vniversi ad quos[1] presens scriptum cyrographatum perueneret quod cum contenciones mote essent inter Thomam[2] abbatem sancti Augustini Cantuarie et eiusdem loci conuentum ex parte vna et Willelmum filium Teobaldi de Helles ex altera de hoc quod cum nuper per inundacionem aque maris per mariscum predicti Willelmi iacentem apud Ferehelle in feodo ipsorum abbatis et conuentus et wallam ipsius Willelmi quam defendisse debuerat versus impetum maris tam idem mariscus quam diuersi marisci dictorum abbatis et conuentus per defaltam ipsius Willelmi fuissent submersi ad dampnum ipsorum abbatis et conuentus non modicum et grauamen, per quod dicti abbas et conuentus exigebant quod idem Willelmus suis sumptibus reedificaret wallam suam predictam et dampna inde habita secundum legem et consuetudinem marisci eisdem abbati et conuentui restitueret. Tandem quia facultates ipsius Willelmi secundum iuris exigenciam ad hoc faciendum non sufficiebant, communibus amicis interuenientibus, contenciones inde mote sub hac forma conquieuerunt, videlicet, quod prefatus Willelmus reddidit et pro se et heredibus et quibuscumque assignatis suis remisit et quietum clamauit dictis abbati et conuentui et eorum successoribus imperpetuum totum predictum mariscum cum fossatis et aliis suis pertinenciis sicut bundis includitur inter viam que ducit a passagio de Serres versus Cantuariam que est ex parte boriali et occidentali et aquam que vocatur Sture que est ex parte australi et orientali cum toto iure suo quod habuit vel aliquo modo habere potuit in marisco supradicto. Et pro hac reddicione remissione et quieta clamacione dicti abbas et conuentus remiserunt et quietum clamauerunt eidem Willelmo omnia dampna que dicebant se habuisse in mariscis suis per defaltam ipsius Willelmi et per inundacionem aque supradicte maris. Et vt hec omnia supradicta imperpetuum stabilia permaneant sigilla partium presenti scripto in modo cyrographi confecto alternatim sunt appensa. De vno vomere apud Chistelet.

(Folio 74, v°.) Domine abbas sancti Augustini Cantuarie hec subscripta declarat vobis Iohannes atte Ware vester tenens de Chistelet quod de quodam tenemento quod quondam adquisiuit de Hamone atte Porte et quod tenetur et tenebatur a vobis per vnum vomerem ad festum sancti Michaelis per annum et illum[2] vomerem solui et modo veniunt seruientes vestri et illum[2] vomerem a me petunt iniuste et amerciauerunt me pro retencione dicti vomeris et super me distrinccerunt pro amerciamento et vomere predictis. Quare peto quod faciatis veritatem inquiri sicut prius vos quesiui per fideles de visneta vel per vestrum domesdei in vestra thesauraria, non per nouos rotulos de nouo editos per vestros nouos seruientes. Et domine abbas si vos inueneritis me culpabilem in ista peticione reddo me amerciamento vestro et ad vestram voluntatem.

De isto vomere primo sic petito fuit primus stipes Theobaldus le libertate qua ipsi tenuerant vbi abbas habet et habere debet et semper habere consueuit dennes et strondes vt patet in itinerariis Reigate[1] Iohannis Berewyk et Heruici Staunton per cartam sancti Edwardi predicti et libertates et consuetudines quas habet quicumque pro tempore fuerit dominus ville siue portus de Sandwico.

Iste sunt consuetudines[2] quibus maior et communitas de Fordwico ab antiquo vtebantur et adhuc vtuntur.

In primis, clamant quod in eadem libertate nullum hundredum tenebunt a festo Natiuitatis beate Marie vsque diem Lune proximo post festum sancti Andree apostoli. Et in illo die presentabunt coram senescallo domini abbatis sancti Augustini Cantuarie vel eius locum tenente omnes consuetudines subscriptas simul cum aliis libertatibus in carta sua existentibus. Et ille dies erit vt visus franciplegii, sed in illa die nulla placita terre ibidem placitabunt. nota.

Item, nullum hundredum teneretur post summonicionem factam dictis baronibus de seruicio domini regis, nec quamdiu contigerit aliquem de libertate eorum esse in seruicio predicto. Et quod nullum hundredum tenebunt si habeant summonicionem ad parliamentum domini regis vel ad curiam de Shipweye. Et quod nullum hundredum tenebunt nisi de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas et hoc per racionabilem summonicionem, videlicet, iij. dierum et inter partes in placito terre per summonicionem xv. dierum. Et quod nullum hundredum tenebunt nisi per diem Lune. +

Item, clamant quod nullum hundredum tenebunt nec ad aliquod iudicium ibunt de aliquibus placitis nisi in dicto hundredo sine presencia maioris et xij. iuratorum dicte ville. Et quod nullus liber homo de dicta libertate amercietur ad aliquem hundredum tentum in dicta villa propter absenciam suam dummodo maior et xij. iurati presentes in iudicio fuerint nisi tantum in hundredo tento die Lune proximo post festum sancti Andree apostoli antedictum et in illo die qui defaltam fecerit amercietur ad vj*d*. Et quod si quicumque de libertate positus fuerit in aliquam inquisicionem et fecerit defaltam per quod amercietur, dictum amerciamentum taxabitur per pares suos et in tali forma leuetur. amerciat.

Item, clamant quod ad omnia placita regalia infra dictam libertatem emergencia si extraneus implacitauerit aliquem liberum hominem de terris vel tenementis infra dictam libertatem existentibus, ille liber homo habebit tales dilaciones, videlicet, iij. summoniciones, iij. essonias, et iij. defectus, et quod in placito debiti transgressionis et conuencionis et in aliis placitis personalibus inter liberum hominem et liberum tot dilaciones habebunt vt in placito terre predicto. Sed si extraneus implacitauerit aliquem liberum hominem in placito debiti transgressionis vel conuencionis vel in aliquo alio placito personali vt predictum est dictus liber homo respondebit de die in diem et hora in horam.

[1] This word is interlined in another hand.

[2] Three other versions of this custumal are known. They are described in vol. xviii of the Publications of the Selden Society at p. xxvii.

Item, clamant quod si vir alienare voluerit ius vxoris sue de terris seu tenementis infra libertatem predictam existentibus, tunc vxor veniet in propria persona coram maiore et iuratis dicte ville et in eorum presencia examinata erit prout moris est in curia domini regis et tunc iuxta confessionem suam secundum modum et consuetudinem ville predicte voluntas sua ad modum finis irrotulabitur et pro recordo inter eos imperpetuum adiudicabitur.

Item, clamant quod quilibet vir et mulier de libertate predicta legare posset omnes terras et tenementa de perquisitis suis infra libertatem predictam et quod faciant testamentum suum de dictis legatis in presencia maioris balliui et iuratorum si ad hoc interesse poterint; et si ad hoc vacare | non possint tunc ad minus coram iij^bus^. iuratis predicte ville qui illam vltimam voluntatem dicti defuncti alias coram maiore balliuo et communitate si necesse fuerit debite probare poterint infra annum et diem post obitum dicti defuncti. Et si ille vel illi cui vel quibus dicta terra vel tenementum sic legatum fuerit dictum testamentum coram maiore balliuo et communitate infra annum et diem probare noluerint tunc predicta terra et tenementum tamquam non legatum rectis hereditatibus quibus de iure contigerint imperpetuum remanebunt. Et si qui per infirmitatem subitaneam vexati fuerint quod testamenta sua de perquisitis predictis concedere[1] non possunt, tunc oretenus coram maiore vel ij. de iuratis ad minus voluntatem suam declarabunt et sic tamquam legatam et in testimonio conditam inter eos obseruabunt et ratificabunt.

Preterea si qui de libertate eorum decesserint intestati bona et catalla sua ad manum maioris et iuratorum deuenient ad disponendum pro dictis defunctis prout ad salutem animarum eorum melius viderint expedire, absque hoc quod quicumque ordinarius ecclesiasticus ob illam causam inter eos qualitercumque intromittat.

[1] 'Concedere' is probably an error for 'condere'.

Item, clamant quod si quis vir aut mulier terras et tenementa sua vendere voluerit in dicta libertate proximioribus de sanguine suo illam vendicionem, prius obtulebunt[1] iuxta consensum[2] dicte ville. Et si quis dictas terras et tenementa antequam sic proximiori optulerit, alicui alio de libertate predicta vel extraneo vendiderit, et ille proximus de sanguine in presencia maioris et iuratorum denarios dicto venditori demonstrauerit ad tantam summam prout ab alio percipere poterit dictus venditor de qualibet libra xij*d.* dicto proximiori de sanguine perdonabit. Et si proximior ille in longinquis partibus tempore vendicionis et empcionis terrarum et tenementorum predictorum extiterit quandocumque infra annum et diem ad domum redierit veniet coram maiore et iuratis et vt proximior ille vendicabit illam conuencionem tunc ad consuetudinem libertatis predicte. Si ita fuerit habebit respectum de solucione denariorum de prima conuencione inter alios facta per terminum xl. dierum pro absencia sua per tantum tempus et si ille qui seisitus sic fuerit nolit ipsum acceptare super vendicacionem suam tunc per visum maioris et iuratorum in dictis terris seu tenementis inmediate intrabit, saluo tamen quod satisfaciet emptori de omnibus denariis quos prius pro terris et tenementis soluerit infra terminum vel in fine termini predicti xl. dierum ad vltimum.

Item, clamant quod liberi de dicta villa terras et tenementorum que infra libertatem predictam vendi contigerint illas pre omnibus forincecis perquirere debent, si voluerint.

Item, clamant quod nulli liberi de dicta villa terras nec tenementa infra libertatem predictam de perquisitis suis releuabunt et quod omnes infra etatem existentes post mortem antecessorum suorum nutritura dictorum minorum per maiorem dicte ville et non per alium illis quibus de iure competit et secundum consuetudinem ville predicte deliberabitur per sufficientem securitatem ad respondendum dicto maiori cum ad etatem peruenerint de catallis suis et aliis pertinenciis suis prout decet et ad seruandum ordinandum et inueniendum eundem prout in casu consimili in corpore communi exigit et requirit.

Item, clamant quod si latro qui fecerit feloniam extra libertatem et prosecutus fuerit pro dicta felonia in dictam libertatem et illi qui sequi voluerint versus eum pro dicta felonia facient sectam suam coram maiore balliuo et iuratis et sic procedent versus dictum felonem ad iudicium quousque acquietatus vel per consuetudinem (Folio 86, r°.) nota.

[2] An error for 'consuetudinem'.

dicte ville conuictus fuerit. Et catalla dicti feloni si que fuerint postquam conuincatur sunt domino regi forisfacta qui est dominus ville.

nota. Item, clamant quod si latro qui pro aliqua felonia extra dictam libertatem facta captus fuerit et illi qui dictum latronem vinctum duxerint et cum eo in dictam libertatem sic introierint sine licencia maioris balliui et iuratorum ville predicte, tunc balliuus cum maiore et iuratis dictum latronem attachiabunt et in prisona domini regis infra dictam libertatem detinebunt quousque illi qui sic dictum latronem duxerint fecerint finem de x*s*. pro le vorueng, vnde medietas domino abbati[1] et alia medietas communitati dicte ville. Et post finem factum et per eosdem solutum dictus balliuus cum maiore et iuratis dictum latronem ad finem libertatis eorum ducent et ibidem illi qui prius ipsum duxerint deliberabunt. Et si qui in casu simili aliquem felonem ad finem dicte libertatis vinctum duxerint et volunt dictam libertatem ingredi et petere licenciam cum maiore balliuo et iuratis dicti maior balliuus et iurati dictum felonem non vinctum per medium dicte libertatis ducent vsque ad finem eiusdem libertatis et ibidem illis hominibus qui prius ducebant ipsum indilate deliberabunt.

Item, clamant quod si aliquis probator extraneus aliquem hominem de libertate eorum appellauerit de aliqua felonia siue dicta felonia facta fuerit in dicta libertate vel extra dictus probator in dictam libertatem ingredietur cum toto apparatu suo prout dicto probatori decet. Et cum venerit in dictam villam ductus erit ad aquam currentem vocatam Stour' et in illa aqua stabit vsque ad vmbilicum cum apparatu suo ad modum probatoris vt predictum est paratus ad appellum probandum et dictus liber homo sic appellatus veniet in vno batello de ij. postis[2] in eadem aqua ad oppositum dicti probatoris indutus cum vno indumento vocato scorrie cum vno instrumento vocato ore de longitudine iij. vlnarum et illo batello affirmabitur ad kayum cum vna corda et in dicta aqua cum dicto probatore pugnabit quousque duellum inter eos finiatur.

nota. Item, clamant quod si aliquod infortunium euenerit infra dictam libertatem quod quis occisus fuerit felonice vel de aliqua domo vel arbore que ceciderit vel per aliquod infortunium simile taliter subito euenerit coronator domini regis ob illam causam libertatem predictam non intrabit sed loco coronatoris maior balliuus et iurati habebunt visum felonis vel infortunii et forisfacti catalla et deodanda si que fuerint domino regi sint forisfacta.

[1] This word is altered from 'regi'. [2] This is perhaps an error for þoftis.

Item, clamant quod si aliquis liber homo vel extraneus pro aliqua (Folio 86, v°.)
felonia arrettatus vel indictatus fuerit extra libertatem vel infra et ad ecclesiam fugerit infra dictam libertatem maior et communitas nota.
dummodo in ecclesia steterit predicta custodiam eius nullatenus habebunt. Et licet a dicta ecclesia infra terminum xl. dierum euaserit maior nec communitas dicte ville aliquod dampnum pro dicta euasione incurrent. Et si ad finem dictorum xl. dierum vel ante dictam libertatem obiurare voluerit maior balliuus et iurati ducent dictum felonem ad finem libertatis ville predicte et ibidem facient obiuracionem secundum consuetudinem libertatis predicte.

Item, clamant quod si quis vir aut mulier de dicta libertate aliquam rem furtiuam emerit infra libertatem vel extra et aliquis illam vt suam propriam vendicauerit et ille emptor cum tercia manu sua legitime posset probare rem illam fideliter emptam et sine dolo emisse, tunc ille qui dictam rem vendicauerit si illam habere voluerit satisfaciat emptori de tanto vt ipse prius pro illa re dederit; alioquin ille emptor illam rem vt suam propriam obtinebit. Et si in tali casu secunda vice aliquis vir aut mulier compertus fuerit res aliquas sic emisse et prosecuti fuerint vt predictum est tunc cum sexta manu probabit rem illam fideliter emisse in omnibus condicionibus vt predictum est et sic libertatem suam gaudebit et si tercia vice super talem empcionem vendicatus fuerit tunc cum xij^{ma} manu probabit rem illam fideliter emisse et si sic probare poterit tunc fiet et sicut superius dictum est. Alioquin si modo predicto probare non poterit tunc secundum legem terre adiudicabitur.

Item, clamant quod dominus rex in nullo casu habebit sectam infra libertatem predictam.

Item, clamant quod si aliquod weyf vel astray' venerit infra liber- nota.
tatem predictam illa qui in cuius custodia fuerit faciet proclamare in ecclesia infra libertatem predictam per tres dies dominicos si quis vendicare voluerit. Et si nullus post proclamacionem predictam clamium suum apponere voluerit, tunc sic in custodia illius per vnum annum et vnum diem commorabit et post annum et diem semel faciet proclamacionem in dicta ecclesia vt predictum est. Et tunc si quis clamium apposuerit et coram maiore et iuratis cum tercia manu sua probauerit illi in cuius custodia per tantum tempus fuerit omnes expensas quas per tantum tempus sustinuerit ad plenum restaurabit, et tunc dicto vendicatori indilate deliberabuntur et si nullus post proclamacionem vendicare voluerit tunc vendantur et expense quas medio tempore apposuerit allocantur et quod suprafuerit vltra expensas vna medietas domino regi et alia communitati dicte ville.

Item, clamant quod postquam elegerint maiorem dicte ville post decimum diem dicte electionis | dictus maior balliuus et iurati cicius quo poterint omnes mensuras infra dictam libertatem vlnas et pondera admensurabunt et si quos defectus in dictis mensuris et vlnis et ponderibus inuenerint illi qui sic in defectu inueniri contigerit secundum consuetudinem ville predicte amerciabuntur vnde medietas domino regi [1] et alia medietas communitati dicte ville.

nota. Causa: quia pertinet ad dominum.

Item, clamant quod quelibet braciatrix que braciare voluerit infra dictam libertatem non debet amerciari pro anno integro nisi ad ij*d.* et dictum amerciamentum soluetur domino regi.

Item, clamant nullum kerbrech infra dictam libertatem.

nota. Causa: causa que supra.

Item, clamant quod si qua braciatrix infra dictam libertatem aliquam seruiciam non sanam vel minoris precii quam esse deberet braciauerit et super hoc querela ad maiorem balliuum et iuratos peruenerit dicta braciatrix amerciabitur ad xj*d.* vnde medietas domino regi et alia medietas communitati dicte ville. Et si super hoc secundo conuicta fuerit amerciabitur ad xxij*d.* vnde medietas domino regi et alia medietas communitati dicte ville. Et si tercio conuicta fuerit periurabit officium braciatricis per vnum annum et vnum diem et tunc non reconcilietur sine licencia maioris balliui et iuratorum.

Item, clamant quod quo ad officium pistoris omnia sicut predictum est de braciatricibus, preter quod si tercio conuictus fuerit super officium suum perdet totum panem suum tunc temporis furnitum et furnus suus penetrabitur et periurabit officium pistoris infra dictam libertatem per vnum annum et vnum diem et non reconcilietur sine licencia maioris balliui et iuratorum.

Item, clamant quod omnes illi sunt liberi homines de dicta villa, videlicet, qui se maritauerint ad aliquem liberum vel liberam de dicta villa. Item, quicumque natus fuerit infra libertatem predictam et eciam, per empcionem libertatis predicte, vt predictum est.

Item, clamant quod si quis gaudere voluerit de libertate eorum habebit recianciam suam per j. annum et j. diem et si placuerit maiori et communitati dicte ville quod fuerit honeste et bone conuersacionis et ille in dicta libertate inter eos moram trahere vlterius voluerit soluet pro dicta libertate habenda xj*d.* vnde medietas domino regi et alia communitati dicte ville.

Item, clamant quod nullus extraneus balliuus faciet attachiamentum infra libertatem predictam preter quam balliuus dicte ville vel minister custodis quinque portuum ob eius defectum.

[1] Above this word is written :—abbati.

Item, clamant omnes liberas consuetudines predictas et alias qui non iam occurrunt memorie quibus nos et antecessores nostri semper huc vsque et a tempore cuius non exstat memoria vsi fuerunt et gauisi simul cum aliis libertatibus in cartis nostris plenius contentis, vt nos tempore futuro pro nobis et heredibus nostris absque calumpnia cuiuscumque de eisdem adiuuari et imperpetuum de cetero gubernari valeamus.

Item, de libertate abbatis ibidem quocienscumque aliquis pisces nauigio veniens in dicto portu de Fordwych applicuerit quia abbas est dominus tam ville quam portus debet abbas et consueuit primam empcionem habere si voluerit. (Folio 87, v°.)

Item, clamant quod maior et iurati seruare et custodire debent mercatores et omnes alios ad predictam villam venientes pro posse eorum, ita quod si balliuus domini accipere velit de ipsis vel eorum mercimoniis custumam nimis amplam vel forte aliam duritiam eis facere voluerit, ibunt ipsi maior et iurati ad predictum balliuum et rogabunt eum vt huiusmodi mala non faciat ad villam regis in detrimentum. Et si requisitus cessare noluerit et mercatores vel alii sequi voluerint ius suum versus balliuum ad curiam domini regis vel ad custodem quinque portuum communitas debet ipsos adiuuare in auxilio et consilio et testificare cum tempus fuerit contra balliuum iniuriam suam. Vel eciam si mercatores sequi non velint vel non possint, debent ipsi maior et iurati in consilio suo facere scribi omnes huiusmodi iniustas capciones et omnia mala que de ipso viderint. Et si quid idem balliuus contra dictam libertatem et communitatem alias maliciose aggredi voluerit, eadem mala sua que tamen verificare possunt in faciem suam proiciant et sic se habeant inimicos male alienis. Bonum est tamen quod maior et balliuus se habeant bono modo vnanimes quia vterque per amiciciam et concilium alterius caucius securius et melius operari poterit in officio suo. Et propter hoc opportet vt sciatur certitudo de hiis que balliuus facere debet de iure ex officio suo vt dicitur postea; scilicet[1] colligere debet ipse per se aut deputatum suum ad hoc assignatum custumam domini abbatis sancti Augustini Cantuarie per suum custumale quia ipse habet regalitatem infra predictam libertatem ex concessione regum prout ipsi reges predictam villam tenuerunt et non aliter. Et de quibus non debet colligere custumam patet, videlicet, de hominibus quibuscumque liberis quinque portuum cum suis membris, de hominibus libertatis ciuitatis Cantuarie qui sunt lottantes et scottantes infra predictam ciuitatem, de hominibus Londonie qui lottantes

[1] MS. :—'sct'.

(Folio 88, r°.) et scottantes | sunt infra muros eiusdem ciuitatis, de hominibus archiepiscopatus Cantuarie qui sunt iacentes et leuantes et eorum olla cocta in archiepiscopatu predicto, de hominibus hundredi de Myddelton qui sunt iacentes et leuantes et eorum olla cocta in hundredo predicto, de hominibus abbatis de la Bataill', de hominibus abbatis sancti Albani. Et omnes alii quicumque mercatores quociens aut quando venerint in dictam libertatem debent ibi custumare iuxta quantitatem mercimoniorum suorum prout continetur in custumali balliue. Et quicumque balliuus aut alius aliquis deliquerit contra libertatem predictam custos noster quinque portuum si necesse fuerit habeat semper oculos suos directos ad iniurias quas fecerint contra communitatem predictam et libertatem pro proficuo suo et forisfactura predicta x*li.* etc.

Item clamant quod quandocumque aut quocienscumque villa predicta de Fordwiche fuerit sine balliuo abbatis monasterii sancti Augustini Cantuarie qui ibi habet sub domino rege regalitatem ville predicte mittet vnum de hominibus suis propriis quemcumque voluerit ad hanc balliuam occupandam eligere cum literis patentibus sub sigillo communi dicti monasterii et aliis literis ipsius abbatis ad maiorem et communitatem de Intendendo quibus literis coram maiore et communitate lectis, balliuus facere debet sacramentum suum coram maiore iuratis et tota communitate per instruccionem ipsius maioris in hunc modum :—

Ego I. vel W. esse volo bonus et fidelis domino nostro regi Anglie et heredibus suis ac eciam domino meo abbati et conuentui sancti Augustini Cantuarie et eorum successoribus et officium balliue fideliter exercere statumque officii mei manutenere, saluis tamen omnibus articulis libertatis ville predicte absque omni lesione obseruandis Sic me adiuuent sancta sanctorum, etc.

Et tunc tradetur virga alba in manu sua per senescallum ipsius abbatis, si ibi presens fuerit, et si non fuerit presens per maiorem. Dicetur communitati quod faciant pro ipso balliuo, et quod sint ei intendentes in omnibus que ad officium et balliuam suam pertinent. Et aliter non teneatur pro balliuo quousque fecerit plenarie quod supradictum est. Et potest ipse balliuus prout tenetur recipere omnes querelas tam liberorum quam extraneorum que fieri contingent (Folio 88, v°.) infra dictam | villam in omni casu; et secundum naturam querele facere debet attachiamentum vel summonicionem vel dimissionem ad plegios et quicquid ad querelam dictam pertinet.

Si autem pars querens fuerit siue defendens extranea vel vtraque pars extranea tenere debet placitum iuxta naturam suam coram maiore balliuo et iuratis dicte ville de die in diem et hora in horam quia omnis extraneus debet ius habere in villa predicta infra tercium diem in omnimodis placitis nisi fuerit in placitis terre aut corone etc.

Potest eciam tam petens quam defendens facere attornatum suum ad lucrandum vel perdendum coram maiore et balliuo vel coram maiore absque balliuo in omni placito nisi in placito terre quia attornati in illo casu non debent recipi nisi in pleno hundredo. Debent autem ipsi extranei ius recipere et ius facere tam coram attornato maioris et balliui quam in presencia eorum. Similiter et debet liber homo contra extraneum vtrum fuerit ipse extraneus querens vel defendens, quia liber homo contra liberum placitare non potest in absencia maioris et balliui et hoc magna causa quod habeatur balliuus residens infra dictam libertatem. Debet ipse balliuus vel eius locum tenens cum talem querelam receperit premunire[1] maiori vel eius locum tenenti quod sit ibi tali die ad huiusmodi placitum tenendum cum iuratis suis qui venire debent vt predictum est.

Debet autem balliuus vel eius seruiens in huiusmodi placito distringere ipsum defendentem racionabiliter ad respondendum, vt si querela fuerit de magno debito magna districcio est capienda, si vero minor capiatur districcio iuxta sui quantitatem quia malum esset si quidam marinarius questus fuerit de magistro suo de iniusta detencione xx*s*. quod magister distringatur per velum nauis sue vel per cablium aut anchoras dummodo alie districciones sufficientes essent in eadem naui inuente. Et recipere | debet balliuus pro huiusmodi districcionibus in aqua vel in terra captis iiij*d*. et amerciamenta ab ipsis qui conuicti fuerint que soluuntur domino abbati. Pro districcionibus vero in terra factis nichil solebat capere nisi amerciamentum ab ipso qui conuictus fuerit quia pro ipso amerciamento debet dominus abbas seruire querenti. (Folio 89, r°.)

Sequitur[2] de rebus illis que dictus abbas habere debet infra dictam libertatem.

In primis, habet ipse prisonam suam et parcum in dominico tenemento suo in dicta villa in omnibus casibus que fieri contingunt infra dictam libertatem. Et habebit eius balliuus qui pro tempore fuerit custodiam dictorum prisone et parci. Et clamat ab antiquo esse vsitatum quamuis aliquis incarceratus in eadem prisona pro quocum-

Carta[1] Willelmi le Alderman.

Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego W. filius I. Alderman de Radyngate dedi concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui rectori et fratribus hospitalis sancti Thomi Cantuarie de Eastbregge viginti et quatuor solidatas et octo denaratas et obolatam annui redditus cum omnibus pertinenciis et cum omni iure inde proueniente, scilicet, in escaetis et releuiis et omnibus aliis rebus recipiendas de subscriptis hominibus et terris quas de me tenuerunt ad eosdem terminos sicut ab eisdem solebam recipere, scilicet, de Elia Arcionario[2] et Iosep Tenore tres solidos, de heredibus Roberti de Rodintun[3] octo denarios, | de (Folio 98, v°.) priore et conuentu Ecclesie Cristi Cantuarie duos solidos et decem denarios, de heredibus Walteri Boel[4] viginti et tres denarios, de Warino de Burgate sex denarios, de heredibus Terrici Aurifabri duos solidos, de mesuagio Siwardi pistoris quatuor solidos, de Warino de la Gayole et heredibus W. filii sui viginti et tres denarios, de monialibus ecclesie Sancti Sepulcri duodecim denarios, de I. filio decani de Hakynton' duos solidos, de Radulfo de Leghe duodecim denarios, de Reginold de Cornhell' octo denarios, de elemosinario ecclesie sancti Augustini quatuor denarios, de Thoma Arcionario decem denarios, de magistro Simone de Thaneto sex denarios, de Willelmo Colyn[5] sex denarios et obolum, de heredibus T. Alderman duodecim denarios. Tenendas et habendas iure hereditario imperpetuum libere et quiete integre et pacifice. Reddendo inde annuatim ad mediam Quadragesimam abbati et conuentui ecclesie sancti Augustini nouem solidos et duos denarios, et michi et heredibus meis duodecim denarios sterlingorum, et ad festum sancti Michaelis michi et heredibus meis duos solidos et obolum pro omnibus aliis seruiciis et aliis rebus. Et ego W. et heredes mei warantizabimus et defendemus dictis rectori et fratribus dicti hospitalis predictum redditum cum pertinenciis contra omnes homines imperpetuum per predictum seruicium. Pro hac autem donacione et concessione dederunt michi predicti rector et fratres ciiij*s*. sterlingorum et acquietauerunt me et omnes possessiones meas versus dominum regem de fine facto coram iusticiariis itinerantibus, scilicet, Martino de Pateshell', Ricardo Duket, W. de Insula, Thoma de Canuile, apud Cantuariam, anno regni regis Henrici filii Iohannis regis xj^{mo}.[6] Et ad magorem securitatem predictis rectori et fratribus faciendam, ego

Sunt x. tenementa in Stodmerse que debent tegere aulam abbatis et cameram et daeriam et orreum et boscarium et ad hec facienda cooperturam colligent, scilicet, m. de stipula et plus si necesse fuerit. Et hec facient propriis expensis et sine prandio. Isti, eciam, qui tenent ista tenementa debent ducere remanens seminis ad curiam sancti Augustini et habebunt inde prandium suum, sicut ipsi de Litleburne. Et si forte ducunt in villam Cantuarie, habebunt pro quolibet equo quadrantem. Et si contingat dominum abbatem venire ad Stodmerse, ibunt pro cibo illius ad curiam sancti Augustini et non vltra. Sunt quidam qui ferent caseum et butyrum et omnia exennia ad predictam curiam et non amplius et pro prandio suo porcos manerii ducent ad poosum[1]. Isti eciam debent arrare x. acras terre domini. Omnes bestie ville tocius intrabunt faldam domini abbatis post xv. dies vltra Pascha vsque ad festum sancti Martini. Bestie, tamen, que operare debent tempore operacionis erunt extra faldam.

Notum sit omnibus hominibus hoc presens scriptum visuris vel audituris quod tale est antiquum seruicium hominum de Stodmershe decem terras tenencium, videlicet, quod debent intrare totum bladum summe telluris ad curiam de Stodmershe pertinentis et totum fenum preter illud quod crescit in marisco qui vocatur Fisspole. Et est sciendum quod predicti tenentes habebunt in bosco dominorum capitalium omne instrumentum pertinens carro cum quo debent intrare predictum bladum et fenum preter quam rotas carri et temones. Et predicti tenentes debent iuuamentum prestare cum cotmannis et seruientibus dominorum capitalium ad parandum totum fenum crescens in quodam prato quod vocatur Eylrichesmed et Eylmersham et Rodbroke et Brademed et Northmed, scilicet, post falcacionem et aspersionem feni, et sciendum quod pro isto seruicio dum durat bis reficient in die plenarie. Preterea sciendum est quod predicti tenentes debent arare decem acras terre quod vocatur Gerserthe et debent herciare totam terram que seminatur post Natale quod vocatur Lentetilthe preterquam terram in marisco et in prato. Et est sciendum quod predicti tenentes pro predicto cariagio et arura et herciagio habebunt in pastura dominorum capitalium triginta pecora libera de pastura, scilicet, decem equos et viginti alia pecora, et pro istis viginti pecoribus dabunt dimidiam marcam, quod non eant in ouile dominorum capitalium a Pentecoste vsque ad Vincula sancti Petri. Et si ita contingat quod habeant plures equos quam decem equos liberos dabunt pro quolibet per se duos denarios. Et alia pecora que habent ibunt in pastura dominorum capitalium, scilicet, singula pro ij. denariis. Et ita predicta pecora ibunt in ouile dominorum capitalium a xv° die post tercium diem Pasche vsque ad festum sancti Martini, videlicet, si tamdiu eant in pastura exceptis xx. pecoribus, sicud prius dictum est (Folio 116, v°.)

[1] Probably 'pessonem' is intended.

Et notandum quod predicti homines decem predictas terras tenentes dabunt annuatim quinque solidos dominis capitalibus pro quodam marisco qui vocatur Phuhemershe in quo debent ire predicta pecora preter libera pecora quia illa debent ire cum pecoribus dominorum capitalium, scilicet, vt in herbagio quia cum illis pecoribus faciunt seruicium eorum. Et sciendum quod quando debent herciare vt prius dictum est, habebunt in bosco dominorum capitalium omne instrumentum pectinis preter quam nauis lignenses pectinis et ollar' equin' lign'.[1] Et sciendum | quod predicti homines predictas x terras tenentes dabunt dominis capitalibus annuatim triginta solidos pro predicto cariagio et herciagio, scilicet, vt domini capitales acquietent predictos tenentes de predicto seruicio. Et sciendum quod predicti tenentes habebunt porcos suos in pastura cum porcis dominorum capitalium, scilicet, vt herbagio et stipula et dabunt pro quolibet porco vnum pullum de valore oboli. Et sciendum quod predicti tenentes debent cooperire aulam dominorum capitalium preter quam porticum et solarium et vnam grangiam preter boueriam xxvj. laquarum et pistrinum et debent habere virgas et stipulam super terram dominorum capitalium, videlicet, quod debent colligere stipulam in agro et seruientes dominorum capitalium debent cariare ad hospicium. Et debent auerare totum remanens de semine Cantuariam preter quam de blado marisci et quando vendunt bladum in villa Cantuarie quisque habebit quadrantem; et quando auerant curiam sancti Augustini Cantuarie[2] habebunt panem et seruisiam.

Sciatis me concessisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse Reginaldo aurifabro terram que iacet a sinistra parte vie que est inter Cantuariam et Litlebourne que defendit se pro xl. acris terre quam abbas et conuentus sancti Augustini Cantuarie concessit ei et heredibus suis hereditarie de se tenendam pro vna marca argenti annuatim eis inde reddenda, sicut carta abbatis et conuentus sancti Augustini testatur. Quare volo et firmiter precipio quod predictus Reginaldus aurifaber et heredes sui post eum terram illam que defendit se [pro] xl. acris terre habeant et teneant de abbate et conuentu sancti Augustini per prenominatum seruicium bene et in pace libere et quiete integre et plenarie et honorifice cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus suis, sicut abbas sancti Augustini Cantuarie eis concessit et carta sua confirmauit. Testibus, R. Wyntoniensi, G. Elyensi et Iohanne Norwicensi episcopis, Godefrido de Lucy, magistro Hugone de Gaherst, comite Willelmo de Maun', Ranulfo de Glanuill', Hugone de Cressy, Thoma Basset, Roberto filio Bernardi, Alano Furnello, Willelmo de Bendeng' apud Westmonasterium. (Folio 134, v°.)

Letters[1] patent dated 20 July 1364 whereby the king gave licence to Thomas of Garwynton to grant to the brothers and sisters of the hospital of St. John of Northgate in the suburb of Canterbury thirty one acres of land sixteen shillings and five pence halfpenny of rent and the rent of eight cocks and eighteen hens in Wyke by Canterbury, wherewith a chantry called Lukedale of the patronage of the said Thomas was anciently founded and endowed. The lands and rents being insufficient for the support of a chaplain were then in the hands of the said Thomas as patron.

An[2] indenture dated 8 August 1364 whereby—after a recital of the licence to Thomas of Garwinton (described above) and a further recital that the said Thomas has granted the land and rents in the licence contained to the brothers and sisters of the hospital of St. John of Northgate, and that the land and rent were held in fee of the abbot and convent of St. Augustine's Canterbury by the service of thirteen shillings (Folio 135, r°.)

[1] Part of this entry is on folio 135 r°. The letters patent are enrolled on Patent Roll, No. 270, m 43.

[2] This entry is written on folios 135 r°, 135 v°, and the top part of 136 r°. Folio 136 v° is left blank.

and four pence a year and defend themselves for forty acres of land against the abbot's court of Langport by fealty service and suit to the said court from three weeks to three weeks and the finding (ad inuenien-dum) of one man for one day to raise hay in the abbot's meadow at Fordwich belonging to his manor of Langport—Robert Rate the prior, the prioress, the brothers and sisters of the hospital acknowledge that the land and rent is held of old of the abbot and convent of St. Augustine's Canterbury; and, they confess that they hold them by the aforesaid service, and they grant that as often as the rent of thirteen shillings and four pence shall be in arrear it shall be lawful for the abbot and his successors to distrain the aforesaid forty acres in Wyke and to retain the distresses as irrepleviable until the rent and services shall be fully satisfied, and the abbot and convent grant to the brothers and sisters that they may purchase the land and rent in the abbot's fee to hold to the brothers and sisters and their successors of the abbot and convent and their successors by the service before mentioned.

Istud totum diffinitum est super compotum Fulconis Peifrere anno supradicto.

Memorandum[2] quod in rotulo lij° facta est ista allocacio Rogero de Leyburne et Henrico de Burne pro eo in firma pro proficuo [comitatus] et pro manerio [et hundredo] de Middelton de DCXXV. marcis :— Et monachis sancti Augustini Cantuarie de elemosina regis quam percipere consueuerunt singulis annis per manum custodis manerii de Middelton sicut continetur in compoto Fulconis Peyfrere de eodem manerio in xliij° de annis l^mo^ lj° et prima quarta parte huius anni xxij*li.* x*s.* et hoc in rotulo principali.[3]

[1] Pipe Rolls, N° 94, Roll 18 (special). Richard atte Bridge was appointed warden on 7 Nov., 1248.

[2] This will be found on Pipe Rolls, N° 112, Roll 23 (Kent). Roger of Leyburne was sheriff in this year, but Henry of Burne accounted for him.

[3] The 'principal' roll of a county is the one on which the account begins, and which has the name of the county written at its foot. When the account is continued on a second roll, the name of the county is placed at the foot but preceded by the word Item ; and when it is continued on a third roll the name is placed at the foot, but in the genitive case preceded by the word Residuum. The rolls (Principal, Item, and Residuum) of all the counties are placed one above another and sewn together at the top. The collection thus formed is itself rolled, and is then called the Great Roll.

Item, in rotulo eodem in Item Kancia[1] vbi Thomas de Burne et Henricus de Burne onerantur de firma manerii de Middelton de iij^bus^ partibus anni lij^di^ allocantur eisdem monachis de eadem elemosina vij*li.* x*s.* de eodem tempore, et sic facta est allocacio de xxx*li.* in ij^bus^ locis.

prouisum et ordinatum est, vt parochiani de omnibus archidiaconatibus sint de cetero cerciores de defectibus contingentibus ne inter rectores et ipsos ambiguitas generetur pro temporibus successiuis. Volumus et de cetero precipimus quod parochiani tenentur inuenire omnia subscripta, videlicet, legendam, antiphonarium, gradale, psalterium, troperium, ordinale, missale, manuale, calicem, vestimentum principale cum casula, dalmatica, tunica cum capa de[1] choro cum omnibus suis appendiciis, frontale ad magnum altare cum tribus tuallis, tria superpellicia, vnum rochetum, crucem processionalem, crucem pro mortuis, turribulum, lanternam,[2] tintinabilum ad differendum coram Corpore Cristi ad visitandum infirmos,[3] pixidem pro Corpore Cristi, honestum velum quadragesimale, vexillum pro rogacionibus, campanas cum cordis, feretrum pro defunctis, vas pro aqua benedicta, osculatorium, candelabrum pro cereo Paschali, fontem cum cerura, imagines in ecclesia, imaginem principalem in cancello, clausuram cimitterii vndique, reparacionem [nauis ecclesie interius et exterius tam in imaginibus quam in fenestris vitreis reparacionem][4] librorum et vestimentorum quandocumque contigerint emendari.[5] [Cetera autem omnia, tam in reparacione cancelli quam in aliis hic non expressis secundum diuersas consuetudines approbatas a locorum rectoribus et vicariis seu ad quos pertinent habent in omnibus reparari sumptibus eorum.][4]

De decimis per ecclesiarum rectores a suis parochianis petendis per constituciones[6] Roberti archiepiscopi editas apud Lambeth' vt patet in sequenti.

Quoniam propter diuersas consuetudines in petendo decimas per diuersas ecclesias inter rectores ecclesiarum et parochianos suos rixe et contenciones scandala et odia permaxima oriuntur, volumus[7] quod in cunctis ecclesiis parochialibus[8] per archidiaconatus[9] constitutis vniformis sit peticio decimarum et profectuum[10] ecclesiarum.

In primis, volumus quod decime de frugibus, non deductis expensis, integre sine aliqua diminucione soluantur, [et] de fructibus arborum et de seminibus omnibus et herbis ortorum nisi parochiani competentem pro talibus [decimis] velint facere redempcionem. Volumus [1] | eciam quod decime de feno vbicumque crescant siue in magnis pratis,[2] siue in cheminis exigantur prout expedit ecclesie persoluantur.

De incrementis [3] animalium volumus,[4] scilicet, de agnis quod pro vj. [agnis] et infra, vj. oboli dentur pro decima [si septem sint agni in numero], septimus agnus et supra semper [5] detur [rectori] pro decima, ita tamen, quod rector ecclesie qui septimum agnum receperit det iij. obolos in recompensacione [parochiano a quo decimam illam receperit]; qui octauum receperit det denarium parochiano; qui nonam receperit, obolum det parochiano, vel expectet rector ecclesie ad alterum annum donec possit decimum agnum habere si maluerit. Et qui ita expectabit semper exigat secundum meliorem vel tercium agnum ad minus de agnis secundi anni et hoc propter expectacionem [6] primi anni; et ita intelligendum est de decima lane. Set si oues alibi in yeme alibi in estate nutriuntur decima est diuidenda. Similiter siquis in medio tempore emerit vel vendiderit oues et certum sit, a qua parochia oues ille venerint diuidenda est decima sicut de re que sequitur duo domicilia. Si autem incertum fuerit, habeat illa ecclesia [totam decimam] infra cuius limites tempore tonsionis oues inueniuntur.

De lacte volumus quod decima detur, dum durat, videlicet, de caseo tempore suo et de lacte in autumpno et yeme nisi parochiani competentem velint pro talibus decimis facere redempcionem [et hoc ad valorem decime et commodum ecclesie]. De prouenientibus molendinorum volumus quod decime exigantur et [7] [fideliter et integre] soluantur vsque ad valorem proueniencium nisi [domini] ad valorem proueniencium faciant decime recompensacionem.[8] De pasturis, autem, et pascuis tam communibus quam non communibus statuimus quod decime fideliter soluantur et hoc per numerum animalium et dierum si [9] expedit ecclesiis. De piscariis autem et apibus sicut de omnibus aliis bonis iuste acquesitis que renouantur per annum statuimus quod decime exigantur set debito [10] modo.[11]

Statuimus eciam quod dentur decime denariorum [12] de artificibus de mercacionibus et de lucro negociacionis, similiter de carpentariis fabris textricibus et omnibus aliis stipendiariis, videlicet, dent decimas de stipendiis suis nisi ipsi stipendiarii aliquod certum velint dare ad opus ecclesie vel ad lumen ecclesie et hoc si rectore ecclesie placuerit. In peticione autem principalis legati volumus quod consuetudo prouincie cum possessione ecclesie obseruetur ita tamen quod rector ecclesie in peticione sua si fuerit vicarius siue capellanus annuus dominum habeat pre oculis; set quoniam multi inueniuntur decimas dare nolentes statuimus quod parochiani amoneantur semel secundo et tercio vt decimas deo et ecclesie soluant fideliter; quod si non emendauerint primo ab ingressu ecclesie suspendantur et sic demum ad solucionem decimarum per censuram ecclesiasticam, si necesse fuerit, compellantur; set cum[1] dicte suspensionis relaxacionem vel absolucionem pecierint ad ordinarium loci mittantur absoluendi et debito modo puniendi. Rectores autem ecclesiarum seu vicarii [aut] capellani annui qui predictas decimas predicto modo seu propter formidinem hominum seu fauorem, dei timore postposito, cum effectu non pecierint, pena suspensionis innodentur donec dimidiam marcam argenti pro inobediencia archidiacono persoluerint.

Quia[2] inter ecclesiarum rectores et parochianos suos litem cupimus extinguere que frequenter oriuntur, statuimus quod si decedens tria ad minus vel plura cuiuscumque generis in bonis | suis habuerit animalia, (Folio 218, r°.)
optimo, si[3] de iure debitum fuerit, reseruato ecclesie sue a qua Sacramenta percepit dum viueret sine dolo fraude et contradiccione qualibet pro decimarum tam personalium vel predialium necnon et oblacionum subtraccionis compensacione ad liberacionem anime sue melius post optimum reseruetur. Quod si duo tamen in bonis decedencium extiterint de mansuetudine ecclesie exaccio quelibet mortuarii nomine remittatur. Hoc autem duximus adiciendum quod similiter viro superstite preobierit ad prestacionem mortuarii minime coartetur quod si post obitum mariti in domus et familie regimen vidua per annum vixerit iuxta formam superius scriptam ad mortuarium obligetur. Hac autem nostra constitucione consuetudini laudabili super mortuariis in nostra diocese hactenus obseruari volumus preiudicium generari quod si decedens huiusmodi numerum non habuerit animalium consuetudo ecclesiastica obseruetur ad solucionem autem debiti mortuarii contradictores et rebelles volumus per locorum ordinarios et per sensuram ecclesiasticam coartari.
